Anguttara Nikāya

The Numerical Discourses

- Book Two -

A New Translation

by

Bhikkhu Candana

Anguttara Nikāya
The Numerical Discourses

A New Translation

BOOK TWO

by

Bhikkhu Candana

Sabbadānaṃ Dhammadānaṃ Jināti

'The gift of Dhamma surpasses all other gifts.'

This book is not for sale.

Its distribution is free of charge.

The Dhamma is NOT to be sold!

Dear Reader,

This is a gift of The Dhamma to You.

All translations of the Suttas/Discourses contained in this book are copyrighted material.

You may copy, reprint, republish and redistribute this work in any medium, provided that you only make such copies available free of charge and do not alter its contents.

Being a Buddhist monk, living without the security of a monastery or a stable Buddhist community, Bhikkhu Candana lives and works through the financial assistance of students and individual supporters who value his work and life mission.

If you would like to make a donation to help him in his daily needs, you can do so through:

https://gofund.me/9d161e0e

Copyright © Bhikkhu Candana, 2020, 2026

www.mindreleased.com

Table of Contents

Dedication 17
INTRODUCTION 18
a brief note 23
Kammakaraṇa Vagga 25
“The Section on Punishments” 25
1. Vajja Sutta (Blameworthy Faults) 25
2. Padhāna Sutta (Striving) 27
3. Tapanīya Sutta (Leading to Remorse) 28
4. Atapanīya Sutta (Not Leading to Remorse) 28
5. Upaññāta Sutta (First-Hand Knowledge) 29
6. Saṁyojana Sutta (Fetter) 30
7. Kaṇha Sutta (Dark and Vile Things) 31
8. Sukka Sutta (Bright and Good Things) 31
9. Cariya Sutta (Virtuous and Pure Conduct) 31
10. Vassūpanāyika Sutta (Observing the Rains Retreat) 32
Adhikaraṇa Vagga 33
“Section on Disciplinary Issues” 33
11 33
12 34
13 35
14 36
15 37
16 39
17 39
18 41
19 42

20 43
Bāla Vagga 45
“The Section on Fools” 45
21 45
22 45
23 46
24 46
25 46
26 47
27 47
28 47
29 47
30 48
31 48
Samacitta Vagga 50
“The Peaceful Heart” 50
32 50
33 51
34 51
35 52
36 53
37 56
38 58
39 59
40 60
41 60
Parisa Vagga 62
“The Section on Gatherings” 62
42 62

43 62
44 63
45 64
46 65
47 65
48 67
49 69
50 70
51 71
Puggala Vagga 73
“The Section on People” 73
52 73
53 73
54 74
55 74
56 74
57 74
58 75
59 75
60 75
61 76
62 76
63 79
Sukha Vagga 80
“The Section on Happiness” 80
64 80
65 80
66 80
67 81

68 81
69 81
70 81
71 82
72 82
73 82
74 82
75 83
76 83
Sanimitta Vagga 84
“Established Upon a Sign” 84
77 84
78 84
79 84
80 85
81 85
82 85
83 85
84 85
85 86
86 86
Dhamma Vagga 87
“The Section on Two Things” 87
87 87
88 87
89 87
90 88
91 88
92 88

93 88
94 88
95 89
96 89
97 89
Bāla Vagga 90
“The Second Section on Fools” 90
98 90
99 90
100 90
101 91
102 91
103 91
104 91
105 92
106 92
107 92
108 92
109 93
110 93
111 93
112 93
113 94
114 94
115 94
116 95
117 95
Āsāduppajaha Vagga 96
“Wishes that are Difficult to Abandon” 96

118 96
119 96
120 96
121 97
122 97
123 97
124 97
125 98
126 98
127 98
128 98
129 99
Āyācana Vagga 100
"The Section on Aspiring" 100
130 100
131 100
132 100
133 101
134 101
135 102
136 102
137 103
138 104
139 104
140 104
Dāna Vagga 105
"The Section on Generosity" 105
141 105
142 105

143 105
144 106
145 106
146 106
147 106
148 107
149 107
150 107
Santhāra Vagga 108
“The Section on the Long-Awaited” 108
151 108
152 108
153 108
154 109
155 109
156 109
157 109
158 110
159 110
160 110
161 110
162 111
Samāpatti Vagga 112
“The Section on the Meditative Attainments” 112
163 112
164 112
165 112
166 113
167 113

168 113
169 113
170 114
171 114
172 114
173 114
174 115
175 115
176 115
177 115
178 116
179 116
Kodhapeyyālam 117
“Abbreviated Sections, Starting with Anger” 117
180 117
181 117
182 117
183 118
184 118
185 118
186 118
187 119
188 119
189 119
190 119
191 119
192 120
193 120
194 120

195..... 120
196..... 121
197..... 121
198..... 121
199..... 121
200..... 122
201..... 122
202..... 122
203..... 122
204..... 123
205..... 123
206..... 123
207..... 123
208..... 124
209..... 124
210..... 124
211..... 124
212..... 125
213..... 125
214..... 125
215..... 126
216..... 126
217..... 126
218..... 126
219..... 127
220..... 127
221..... 127
222..... 128
223..... 128

224 128
225 128
226 129
227 129
228 129
229 130
Akusalapeyyālam 131
“Abbreviated Section on the Harmful and Damaging” 131
230 131
231 131
232 131
233 131
234 132
235 132
236 132
237 132
238 133
239 133
240 133
241 133
242 134
243 134
244 134
245 134
246 135
247 135
248 135
249 135
250 135

251..... 136
252..... 136
253..... 136
254..... 136
255..... 137
256..... 137
257..... 137
258..... 137
259..... 138
260..... 138
261..... 138
262..... 138
263..... 139
264..... 139
265..... 139
266..... 139
267..... 140
268..... 140
269..... 140
270..... 140
271..... 141
272..... 141
273..... 141
274..... 141
275..... 141
276..... 142
277..... 142
278..... 142
279..... 142

Vinayapeyyālam 143
"Abbreviated Sections on The Monastic Code of Discipline" 143
280 143
281 145
282 146
283 148
284 150
285 152
286 154
287 155
288 157
289 159
290 161
291 163
292 165
293 166
294 168
295 170
296 172
297 174
298 175
299 177
300 179
301 181
302 183
303 185
304 187
305 189
306 191

307 192
308 194
309 196
Rāgapeyyālam 199
“Abbreviated Sections, Starting with Passion” 199
310 199
311-319. 199
320-479. 200
a final note 208

Dedication

This work is reverently and lovingly dedicated to the late Venerable Bhikkhu Kaṭukurunde Ñāṇananda, a true Noble Son of The Blessed One, whose fearless clarity, meditative depth of understanding, and unwavering fidelity to the early word of The Buddha rekindled the living flame of The Dhamma in our time. Therefore, with a heart overflowing with profound gratitude and deep admiration, I bow in veneration to my late teacher, acknowledging him as the greatest inspiration behind this undertaking. May the merits arisen here be shared in his honor, and may his example continue to guide sincere seekers back to the luminous simplicity of The Teaching, revealed to existence by The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha.

Also, this work could not have been possible without the care and attention of my late parents and teachers, as well as students and all those supporters, whose hearts resonate to the same tune, that is the unmistakable love for The Dhamma.

With profound gratitude and a heart full of devotion, I humbly dedicate this work to The Triple Gem and The Truly Holy Noble Disciples, who have crossed the flood. Their wisdom and compassion have shaped my understanding, and it is with deep reverence that I offer this translation of the Anguttara Nikāya, a cornerstone of the Buddhist Pāli Canon, to posterity.

As a practitioner, psychotherapist, and teacher, I embarked on this solitary journey, weaving together years of academic study and meditative practice. The result is a comprehensive and nuanced translation that seeks to capture the essence of the suttas (discourses) in their entirety.

In the spirit of preserving the authenticity of Lord Buddha's Teachings, i.e. The Dhamma, this translation endeavors to include all sections almost always omitted by others for the sake of brevity. Every discourse, every verse, and every lesson within these sacred texts have been meticulously examined and presented, sparing neither time nor energy to ensure a faithful rendering.

As the world grapples with uncertainty and strife, may this humble offering serve as a beacon of light, a gift of Dhamma to those in need.

Whatever countless merits have been gained by supporters of this project and of my life and work, as a Bhikkhu in this changing world, may their rewards perpetually increase, exponentially, protecting The Sāsana and the genuine Teachings of Lord Buddha, which are being polluted daily and driven to extinction, as predicted by Lord Buddha Himself.

May the Blessings of the Triple Gem be with you, in your hearts, always…

Mettācittenā,
Bhikkhu Candana
Buddhist Era 2569 (2026)

INTRODUCTION

A New Translation of Anguttara Nikāya: The Numerical Discourses

The Anguttara Nikāya, the "Collection of Discourses Arranged by Number," is one of the most elegantly practical repositories of The Buddha's Teachings. Its structure reflects a natural law of learning: that profound understanding arises from the gradual accumulation and integration of simple principles. By organizing The Dhamma into numerical sets – ones, twos, threes, and so forth – the collection offers a path that is both systematic and organic, resonating equally with the newly interested reader and the dedicated practitioner.

Unlike texts shaped by philosophical argument or doctrinal exposition, the Anguttara Nikāya thrives on direct encounters: The Buddha addressing a monk struggling with his duties, a layperson navigating ethical challenges, a king pondering governance, or a wanderer seeking clarity. These dialogues reveal something essential about The Dhamma: that it was never meant to float in abstraction, but to be met within the "living laboratory" of human experience.

The very structure of the collection highlights the relatability and contextual intimacy of the Teaching, where each sutta emerges from specific people in specific circumstances – moments of confusion, insight, conflict, or breakthrough. The Dhamma is shown as it actually operated in the world: clear, compassionate, precise, and always geared toward Release.

This translation is part of a larger undertaking that has been developing over the course of more than seven years. The project began as an effort to narrate large sections of the Pāli Canon, driven by a simple but sincere aspiration to make the suttas directly accessible to anyone, anywhere, without cost or barriers. Narration gradually revealed textual inconsistencies, missing repetitions, and interpretive issues that required urgent attention. What began as narration, therefore, expanded into a full-scale, line-by-line retranslation of the Nikāyas.

Throughout this work, I have adhered to a few essential principles.

The first is faithfulness to the Pāli, including a devoted restoration of the many repetitions that have been removed by editors over the centuries. These repetitions are not ornamental flourishes. They are the heartbeat of an oral tradition that preserved The Dhamma for centuries before a single word was written. Their rhythm reinforces memory, emphasis, and practice. They enable the teachings to sink deeply into one's understanding. Modern tendencies to remove or abbreviate them often create an impression of terseness that simply does not reflect the original mode of transmission.

In this translation, the repetitions are restored and preserved in full – even when doing so demanded long days, and sometimes weeks, of translation, narration, and transcription, in a dedicated effort to re-link these dismembered and scattered sections of the discourses. In addition, key Pāli terms are retained where necessary, allowing readers to trace meanings accurately, while English renderings convey accessibility and readability.

Here, I feel it is necessary to say a few words about the very rich and ultra-nuanced terms used by The Buddha in His dissemination of The Dhamma.

Although many such terms were used by His contemporaries, such as dhamma, tathāgata, vimutti, kamma, brahmin, etc., the Great Teacher reintroduced these terms by rendering a thoroughly new and different meaning for each. One such organically and highly contextual Pāli term that The Blessed One used was "saṅkhāra." Here, I have used several definitions for "saṅkhāra" throughout this retranslated work of the Numerical Discourses (as well as in the other collections or Nikāyas), rather than being rigidly bound to a single definition. To this end, readers will discover "saṅkhāra" presented as "habitual drive(s)," "generative cause(s)," "winding," "preparing" or "loading up," or "conditioned." Often, however (as with other terms like Citta or Samādhi), I have found it essential to simply leave it in its Pāli form, as purely "saṅkhāra." This, because readers are highly encouraged to become familiar with the original Pāli forms of these extremely important terms, given their unique role within The Buddhist Training, instead of using the current familiar and rather limited English definitions for it, i.e. "formation," "fermentation," "choices," etc.

The second principle to which I have adhered in this work is directness. The Dhamma of the Nikāyas speaks for itself. It does not require elaborate conceptual scaffolding, philosophical preambles, or densely packed pages of academic framing for its meaning to become evident. Therefore, this Introduction – while providing necessary orientation – deliberately avoids to become another scholarly essay that stands between the reader and The Buddha's words. In recent decades, we have grown accustomed to multi-layered commentary, footnotes, digressions, doctrinal charts, and interpretive debates. Such materials may hold value in certain contexts, yet they risk turning the living Dhamma into an object of intellectual fascination rather than a Path of Practice and True Liberation.

My intention is to gently encourage the reader to step beyond the habit of meeting the Nikāyas through an academic lens alone.

The Buddha did not care to speak to scholars.

He spoke to human beings – farmers, kings, merchants, recluses, artisans, wanderers – people with fears, hopes, questions, and obstacles not unlike our own.

The Dhamma is timeless because it speaks directly, clearly, and compassionately to the very structure of human experience. It is not my place to obscure this directness with layers of theoretical framing. Rather, I strive to allow the suttas to shine through uninterrupted, so the reader may meet them as the early Saṅgha did: openly, attentively, and without preconception. This because, the teachings are not bound by time or place; they remain as potent and transformative today as they were when first spoken, offering a path to liberation for all who engage with them sincerely. So, approach them reflectively, with care and attention, and allow The Dhamma to unfold naturally in your own experience.

Another central dimension of this project has been the recognition, that such an undertaking requires not only scholarly training and linguistic skill, but the full commitment of monastic life. Some years ago, I closed my psychotherapy practice as a clinician, and embraced homelessness as a Bhikkhu to devote myself entirely to the preservation and translation of The Buddha's discourses. This was not a romantic or symbolic gesture, but a necessary step. The depth of attention demanded by this work – its precision, continuity, and meditative integrity – could not coexist with professional responsibilities.

This translation exists only because of the generosity of supporters whose faith and kindness have sustained me with the four requisites of a Bhikkhu: food, clothing, shelter, and medicine. Without their help, this task – spanning thousands of pages, countless hours, and multiple continents across the world – would not have been possible. To these individuals, I express my deepest gratitude. And the merit of preserving The Dhamma is shared fully and freely with all who have supported and encouraged this effort, and continue to do so.

The Anguttara Nikāya is especially suitable for modern readers. Its structure allows The Dhamma to be entered at any point – one may read a single short sutta and carry its teaching through the day, or delve into thematic clusters that illuminate The Path from multiple angles. Its emphasis on gradual cultivation mirrors the lived reality of practice: step by step, quality by quality, choice by choice, moment by moment.

It is my sincere wish that this translation bring the reader into direct contact with the liberating clarity of The Buddha's words. May these teachings be approached with mindfulness and humility, without haste or presumption. And may they serve as a steady light in a world that, like ancient India, is marked by both beauty and confusion, both aspiration and suffering.

Offered freely, without condition, and with a heart dedicated to the continuation of The Buddha's Dispensation, this work is for the benefit of all beings.

Bhikkhu Candana,
Buddhist Era 2569 (2026)

Dukanipāta

–

Book of the Twos

a brief note

The Book of Twos

Dukanipāta

The Book of Twos explores the natural dualities that structure human experience—pairs of qualities, choices, and outcomes that shape our movement toward suffering or toward Liberation.

By presenting teachings in pairs, we see how The Buddha helps His listeners to recognize the relational dynamics between cause and effect within their own lives, especially in making the distinction between a fool and a wise person; the two kinds of happiness (spiritual vs. worldly), as well as the two types of power: the power of reflection and the power of mental development.

Here, in these teachings, a special emphasis is placed upon the very important role of the "Twin Mechanism" of Serene Mental Quietude (Samatha) and Penetrative Insight (Vipassana) (AN 2.310-479).

These suttas or discourses highlight contrasts, such as wholesome and unwholesome action, beneficial and damaging states, and the two paths leading respectively to benefit or to decline. This, including the differences between the truly genuine and good Bhikkhus, and those Bhikkhus who will become the majority, as they deceive the public and the faithful, leading them astray from the Good and Wholesome Dhamma (AN 2.39-51).

The clarity of these contrasts offers readers an opportunity to see how each moment invites a choice, and how even small distinctions in thought or behavior can lead to profound spiritual consequences. The Twos are practical, sharp, and deeply relevant to anyone walking The Buddhist Path.

Anguttara Nikāya

The Numerical Discourses

A New Translation

Namo Tassa Bhagavato Arahato Sammasambuddhassa
Namo Tassa Bhagavato Arahato Sammasambuddhassa
Namo Tassa Bhagavato Arahato Sammasambuddhassa

Dukanipāta

Book of the Twos

Suttas 1 - 479

AN II

Suttas 1-10

Kammakaraṇa Vagga

"The Section on Punishments"

1. Vajja Sutta (Blameworthy Faults)

I have personally heard this.

At one time, while The Blessed One was living at the monastery offered by Anāthapiṇḍika at Jeta's Park, in Sāvatthī, He addressed the Bhikkhus by saying:

"Bhikkhus!"

"Yes, Bhante," they replied.

And The Blessed One continued:

"Bhikkhus, there are these two faults that are blameworthy. And what are they?

"The fault of something that is reflected immediately upon the current life, and the fault that is reflected upon future lives.

"Now, what is the fault that is blameworthy, reflected immediately upon this present life?

"Here, Bhikkhus, someone sees a criminal or some evil doer who is 'caught red-handed' and brought before the king, and the king sentences him to a series of punishments.

"Thus, the onlooking man witnesses the criminal being flogged and inflicted with all kinds of corporal punishments, such as being whipped repeatedly, caned repeatedly, beaten with clubs and sticks that are soiled and dipped in filth; he sees the criminal being tortured by having his fingers, toes, hands and feet cut off; he sees how the man is then thrown into the gruel pot, where he has his head and body hair shaved off with seashells; then thrown into the pit of darkness, after which he is pulled out and a wreath of burning flames is placed around his neck for him to wear; he then has his hands squeezed into the 'blazing fiery gloves' to wear; he is tortured some more by having to wear a gown made of sharp blades of grass, or the bark dress, or those made from rough and abrasive antelope hide that peel off his skin; he is then placed upon meat hooks and hung from them to dry; his skin is then cut and pulled off, piece by piece, into the size of small coins. He is then thrown into a mixture of bleach, then pulled out and pushed into a hole into the ground, as his torturers spin the rest of his body around, while he stands fixed in position. He is then beaten some more and then tossed into hot boiling oil, or given to wild hungry dogs that eat him alive, nibbling and grinding their sharp teeth into his flesh and bones; or he is raised up onto a sharp spike to die on it, or have his neck cut off with a sword.

"Then, the other man witnessing all this, pauses to consider, how the criminal who was caught for having committed an evil act, had to endure all that suffering and unimaginable pain. He reflects further, and sees that if he too were to engage in evil behavior, on committing a crime, he also would have to endure all that torture, himself being subjected to the same punishments.

"On realizing the significance of this, the man becomes afraid of such a dreadful prospect befalling him in his current lifetime, and as a result, he abstains from engaging in any evil or damaging conduct, such as stealing or taking what is not given to him.

"In this way, the blameworthy fault manifests here, as its impact is immediately reflected upon the current life.

"And what, Bhikkhus, is the blameworthy fault that is reflected upon future lives?

"Here, someone reflects carefully as he begins considering:

'Evil or damaging conduct of any kind, in the form of intentional actions that I commit through my body, sooner or later, will bring me its evil outcomes which are inescapable, if not now in this current life, then for sure, I will have to face their consequences in my future births.

'Evil or damaging conduct of any kind, in the form of intentional actions that I commit through my speech, sooner or later, will bring me its evil outcomes which are inescapable, if not now in this current life, then for sure, I will have to face their consequences in my future births.

'Evil or damaging conduct of any kind, in the form of intentional actions that I commit through my mind, sooner or later, will bring me its evil outcomes which are inescapable, if not now in this current life, then for sure, I will have to face their consequences in my future births.

'Therefore, whether through my body, speech, or mind, whatever evil actions that I intentionally commit, once this body breaks down, after death, as a result of such behavior I will most certainly end up in a terrible destination, in a miserable realm, in the lower worlds, even in hell!'

"Then, on realizing the significance of this, the man becomes afraid of such a dreadful prospect befalling him in his future lifetimes, and as a result, he abstains from engaging in any evil or damaging conduct committed through the body, and instead chooses to engage in beneficial and good actions with his body.
"Similarly, he abstains from engaging in any evil or damaging conduct committed through his speech, and instead chooses to engage in beneficial and good actions with his speech.

“Similarly, he abstains from engaging in any evil or damaging conduct committed through his mind, and instead chooses to engage in beneficial and good actions with his mind.

“In this manner, the man lives a life that is pure, maintaining a virtuous character throughout his life. This, therefore, is called the blameworthy fault that is reflected upon future lives.

“Bhikkhus, now that you are familiar with these two blameworthy faults, you must diligently engage yourselves by training daily, thus:

‘We too shall fear the outcomes of blameworthy faults that are reflected upon this life, as well as the blameworthy faults that are reflected upon future lifetimes. In this way, we shall train ourselves to abstain from all faults, by looking at the imminent danger they pose if we were to commit any of them.’

“Thus you must train yourselves, Bhikkhus, for all those who truly abstain from engaging in blamable faults by looking at the imminent danger they pause, become truly liberated from them, once and for all.”

2. Padhāna Sutta (Striving)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two kinds of striving, which are difficult to achieve in this world.

“What are they?

“One is the striving of a lay person who lives the household life, while providing robes, alms food, a dwelling place, and medicinal requisites for monastics whenever they are in need of them.

“The other kind of striving is that of the one who has gone forth by leaving the household life, in order to diligently dedicate oneself to the total relinquishment of all assets.

“These, Bhikkhus, are the two kinds of striving, which are difficult to achieve in this world.

“Now, the best among these two kinds of striving, Bhikkhus, is the striving that takes you to the total and complete relinquishment of all assets.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, you must train yourselves in this manner:

‘We shall endeavor by striving diligently, to attain the total relinquishment of all assets.’”

“It is in this manner that you must practice and train, Bhikkhus.”

3. Tapanīya Sutta (Leading to Remorse)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things that lead to remorse, as one experiences painful regret. And what are these two?

“Here, Bhikkhus, someone has engaged in wrong behavior through improper bodily conduct, while also not having done good deeds through good and proper bodily conduct.

“Similarly, someone has engaged in wrong behavior through improper verbal conduct, while also not having done good deeds through good and proper speech.

“And, someone has engaged in wrong behavior through improper thinking and mental conduct, while also not having done good deeds through good and proper thinking and mental conduct.

“As a result, that person experiences much regret, feeling remorse for having missed the opportunity to behave in a beneficial and proper manner, as he reflects:

‘Alas, I have engaged in bad bodily actions,’ as he experiences much remorse, especially realizing that he has not tried making up for them by doing their opposite, to at least engage in good bodily actions.

“Similarly, he reflects:

‘Alas, I have engaged in bad verbal actions in my communications,’ as he experiences much remorse, especially realizing that he has not tried making up for them by doing their opposite, to at least engage in good speech in his verbal actions.

“And also, he reflects:

‘Alas, I have engaged in bad mental actions through my thinking,’ as he experiences much remorse, especially realizing that he has not tried making up for them by doing their opposite, to at least engage in good mental actions.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these are the two things that lead to remorse, as one experiences painful regret.”

4. Atapanīya Sutta (Not Leading to Remorse)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things that do not lead to remorse, nor the experiencing of painful regrets. And what are these two?

“Here, Bhikkhus, someone has engaged in good behavior through proper bodily conduct, while also having refused to engage in bad deeds through evil and improper bodily conduct.

“Similarly, someone has engaged in good behavior through proper verbal conduct, while also having refused to engage in bad deeds through evil and improper speech.

“And, someone has engaged in good behavior through proper mental conduct, while also having refused to engage in bad deeds through evil and improper thinking or mental conduct.

“As a result, that person does not experience any regrets, nor does he feel remorse, for he has protected himself by having refused to engage in evil and improper behavior, as he reflects:

‘I have engaged in good bodily actions,’ as a result of which, he does not experience any remorse, especially realizing that he has also abstained from any misconduct, by refusing to engage in evil bodily actions.

“Similarly, he reflects:

‘I have engaged in good verbal actions in my communication,’ as a result of which, he does not experience any remorse, especially realizing that he has also abstained from any verbal misconduct, by refusing to engage in evil speech in his verbal actions.

“Also, he reflects:

‘I have engaged in good mental actions in my thinking,’ as a result of which, he does not experience any remorse, especially realizing that he has also abstained from any mental misconduct, by refusing to engage in evil thoughts in his mental actions.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these are the two things that do not lead to remorse, nor the experiencing of painful regrets.”

5. Upaññāta Sutta (First-Hand Knowledge)

“Bhikkhus, I have acquired first-hand knowledge of these two things: not becoming contented and satisfied with whatever beneficial qualities I had developed, and never quitting in my efforts to reach the Goal.

“In this way, I never ceased from giving it my very best, having fully committed myself, as I kept determining:
‘No matter if all that is left of me is my worn-out skin, ligaments, and bones! I do not care if my flesh and blood become all dried up and no more. I will still go on, never relinquishing my efforts nor giving up! I will not stop or take rest until I have attained that which is possible through sheer manly strength, determined persevering energy, and will-power!’

“So, you see, Bhikkhus, Awakening took place because of the relentless drive, the vigilance and unstoppable determination with which I was able to finally achieve the ultimate safety, the Absolute Release from all bondage.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, if you also shall muster up the willingness and exert yourselves by taking up this noble and matchless challenge, as you too resolve with firmness:

‘No matter if all that is left of me is my worn-out skin, ligaments, and bones! I do not care if my flesh and blood become all dried up and no more. I will still go on, never relinquishing my efforts nor giving up! I will not stop or take rest until I have attained that which is possible through sheer manly strength, determined persevering energy, and will-power!’

“Bhikkhus, if you truly do put the effort in this manner, then I guarantee that before long, you too will attain, here and now, by finally realizing for yourselves the Noble End, the very Goal of the Holy Life, as you also experience for yourselves that Unsurpassed Knowledge for which sons of good families willingly and with faith leave the household life, by going forth into homelessness. And thus, you will comfortably dwell in that Ultimate Security.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, you should train in this manner:

‘No matter if all that is left of me is my worn-out skin, ligaments, and bones! I do not care if my flesh and blood become all dried up and no more. I will still go on, never relinquishing my efforts nor giving up! I will not stop or take rest until I have attained that which is possible through sheer manly strength, determined persevering energy, and will-power!’

“Bhikkhus, it is in this manner that you must practice and train.”

6. Saṁyojana Sutta (Fetter)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. What two?

“One is looking upon phenomena that are of the nature to fetter and bind as gratifying and pleasurable, while the other is to penetratingly see their binding nature and become disgusted and disenchanted by them.

“Bhikkhus, all those who enjoy and delight in things that fetter, while seeing them as satisfying, cannot free themselves from lust and passions; they cannot free themselves from hatred and anger; and they cannot free themselves from delusion. And when these three are not abandoned, then one is not released from future births, from sickness, old age and death, from sadness, nor does one become liberated from sorrow, lamentation, pain, depression, and anguish.

“Therefore, I declare that such a person is still deeply and inescapably entrenched within suffering.

“However, Bhikkhus, all those who look upon phenomena and see their nature to bind and fetter, as they penetrate through their fake appearance with wisdom, become disgusted and disenchanted by them, as a result, they free themselves from lust and passions; they free themselves from hatred and anger; and they free themselves from delusion. And when these three are abandoned, then one is released from future births, from sickness, old age and death, liberated from sadness; liberated from sorrow, lamentation, pain, depression, and anguish.

“Therefore, I declare that this person is released and free from suffering.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two things.”

7. Kaṇha Sutta (Dark and Vile Things)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two dark and vile things. What two?

“Lacking wise inner moral shame, and lacking wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two things that are truly dark and vile.”

8. Sukka Sutta (Bright and Good Things)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two bright and good things. What two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame (hirī), and possessing wise moral fear (ottappa) in one’s heart.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two things that are truly bright and good.”

9. Cariya Sutta (Virtuous and Pure Conduct)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two virtuous and pure things that protect the world. What two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and possessing wise moral fear in one’s heart.
“And if, Bhikkhus, these two virtuous and pure things did not protect the world, then one would not distinguish between one’s own mother, sister, aunts, or the wives of one’s teachers, and other respected individuals, treating them all as objects of his sensual lust. Therefore, with no sense of moral restraint or dignity, boundaries disappear as the world becomes a promiscuous cesspool where people would behave much like dogs and jackals, chickens and pigs, like goats and sheep.

“Therefore, because of the presence of these virtuous and pure qualities, by possessing wise inner moral shame and wise moral fear in one’s heart, the world is kept protected. As a result, one does distinguish between one’s own mother, sister, aunts, and the wives of one’s own teachers, and other respected individuals.”

10. Vassūpanāyika Sutta (Observing the Rains Retreat)

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of observing the Rains. Whish two?

“Observing the earlier Rains retreat and observing the later Rains, wherein the latter of these two begins a month after the first has ended.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these are the two ways of observing the Rains.”

AN II

Suttas 11-20

Adhikaraṇa Vagga

"Section on Disciplinary Issues"

11.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two powers. Which two?

"There is the power of wisely reflecting, and the power of developing.

"Now, Bhikkhus, what is the power of wisely reflecting?

"Here, Bhikkhus, someone carefully scrutinizes while reflecting:

'Whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through physical actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through exchange of words or verbal actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through mental actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits.'

"And by wisely reflecting in this manner, that person gives up engaging in evil actions, and instead starts by choosing to engage in good and appropriate physical actions. Similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate exchange of words or verbal actions. And similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate mental actions while thinking and considering. In this manner, he purifies himself continuously, while trying to maintain pure conduct throughout life. This, therefore, is called the power of wisely reflecting.

"And what, Bhikkhus, is the power of developing?

"This one, Bhikkhus, refers specifically to the power possessed by the Noble Disciple in Training, who by relying on this unique power he possesses, uses it to willfully renounce passions, hatred, and delusion. And once having given them up, he does not engage in any unwholesome or evil actions ever again, to the extent possible within his respective ability, and thus he does not add any harmful fruits or consequences for him to deal with either here or in a future life. This, therefore, is called the power of developing.

“These two, Bhikkhus, are thus called the two powers.”

12.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two powers. Which two?

“There is the power of wisely reflecting, and the power that comes from cultivation.

“Now, Bhikkhus, what is the power of wisely reflecting?

“Here, Bhikkhus, someone carefully scrutinizes while reflecting:

‘Whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through physical actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through exchange of words or verbal actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through mental actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits.’

“And by wisely reflecting in this manner, that person gives up engaging in evil actions, and instead starts by choosing to engage in good and appropriate physical actions. Similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate exchange of words or verbal actions. And similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate mental actions while thinking and considering. In this manner, he purifies himself continuously, while trying to maintain pure conduct throughout life.

“This, therefore, is called the power of wisely reflecting.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the power that comes from cultivation?

“Here, Bhikkhus, the Bhikkhu continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Mindfulness which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Investigation of Mind Objects which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Persevering Energy which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Spiritual Joy which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Tranquility of Mind which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Samādhi which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“Similarly, he continuously works to cultivate within himself the Awakening Factor of Equanimity which relies upon seclusion for its sustenance; it relies upon fading away for its sustenance, that in turn leads to dispassion; it relies upon cessation for its sustenance; and reaches its full ripening with the experience of Release.

“And this itself is called the power that comes from cultivation.

“These two, Bhikkhus, are therefore called the two powers.”

13.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two powers. Which two?

“There is the power of wisely reflecting, and the power that comes from cultivation.

“Now, Bhikkhus, what is the power of wisely reflecting?

“Here, Bhikkhus, someone carefully scrutinizes while reflecting:

‘Whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through physical actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through exchange of words or verbal actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits. Similarly, whether in the present life or in future lifetimes still to come, all evil behavior committed through mental actions will produce and deliver its painful fruits.'

"And by wisely reflecting in this manner, that person gives up engaging in evil actions, and instead starts by choosing to engage in good and appropriate physical actions. Similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate exchange of words or verbal actions. And similarly, he chooses to engage in good and appropriate mental actions while thinking and considering. In this manner, he purifies himself continuously, while trying to maintain pure conduct throughout life.

"This, therefore, is called the power of wisely reflecting.

"And what, Bhikkhus, is the power that comes from cultivation?

"Here, Bhikkhus, while living secluded and removed from sensual desires and unwholesome thoughts, the Bhikkhu enters upon and remains in the first jhāna, which is accompanied by thinking and planning, with joy and pleasure that arise from such seclusion.

"Next, through the disappearance of both thinking and planning, he enters upon and remains in the second jhāna, which has self-confidence and singleness of mind, that take place in the absence of thinking and planning, with joy and pleasure that are the result of the collected stability of the mind.

"Further, with the detachment from and the fading away of joy itself, the Bhikkhu remains in the comfort of equanimity, while being mindful and fully aware with pristine clarity, experiencing pleasure and happiness within the body, as he enters upon and remains in the third jhāna, about which the Noble Ones declare:

'It is such a one indeed who is serenely mindful; abiding in happiness; with an ever-present sense of equanimity.'

"Afterwards, by giving up both pleasure and pain, and having already gone beyond joy and anguish, he remains in a state of purifying mindfulness with the ever-growing sense of equanimity, while experiencing neither pleasure nor pain, having gone beyond both, as he attains to the fourth jhāna.

"And this itself is called the power that comes from cultivation.

"These two, Bhikkhus, are therefore called the two powers."

14.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two methods of teaching The Dhamma as imparted by The Tathāgata. What two?

“Dhamma that is presented and taught in its brief form, and Dhamma that is presented and taught in detail.

“These, Bhikkhus, are therefore the methods of teaching The Dhamma as imparted by The Tathāgata.”

15.

“Bhikkhus, when the Bhikkhu commits a wrong action, and another Bhikkhu who has confronted him by pointing out the misconduct and is chastising him, if both do not observe what is taking place within each of their individual hearts, by reflecting carefully on the events that transpired, then the matter would take quite a long time to reach a settlement or some kind of a closure. Meanwhile, the Bhikkhus will come to have resentment and disgust towards each other, and thus experience much suffering for a long time.

“And how, Bhikkhus, can the Bhikkhu who commits a wrong action observe what is taking place within his heart, by reflecting carefully on the events that transpired?

“Here, Bhikkhus, having already engaged in a misconduct, the Bhikkhu begins reflecting:

‘Well, it is a fact that I made a mistake, committing a damaging and wrong action, having ‘taken the bait’ from one or more of the sense doors, thus truly engaging in an offence. And this Bhikkhu has simply seen me commit this offence, where I ‘took the bait’ from one or more of the sense doors.

‘Now, if I had not done this, by not committing such a damaging and wrong action, then this Bhikkhu would simply not have seen nor witnessed me engaging in any such thing, in the first place!

‘But since I did commit a damaging and wrong action, having ‘taken the bait’ from one or more of the sense doors, thus truly engaging in an offence, as a result, this Bhikkhu has seen me do it, and in turn became upset at me and said those reproving and harsh words while chastising me. In retaliation, because I was now upset at the way I was treated by him, I went and said those mean things about this Bhikkhu to others. Then, when that Bhikkhu learned of this, he again became upset and went and spoke badly about me to others.

‘So, when you think about it, I was the one who started this whole mess!

‘Therefore, I must be the one who goes to him, to apologize for what I have done. That way, I can simply put an end to this unpleasant and bitter situation between us, just like a merchant who owes fees to the King’s men for importing goods into the kingdom.’

"This, Bhikkhus, is how that Bhikkhu who commits a wrong action observes what is taking place within his heart, by reflecting carefully on the events that transpired.

"And how, Bhikkhus, does the accusing Bhikkhu observe what is taking place within his heart, by reflecting carefully on the events that transpired?

"Here, Bhikkhus, the chastising Bhikkhu who confronted the former, begins to reflect:

'Well, it is a fact that this Bhikkhu made a mistake, by committing a damaging and wrong action, having 'taken the bait' from one or more of his sense doors, thus truly engaging in an offence. Meanwhile, I was the one who simply saw him commit this offence, where he 'took the bait' from one or more of his sense doors.

'Now, if he had not done this, by not committing this damaging and wrong actions, then I would simply not have seen nor witnessed him engaging in any such thing, in the first place!

'But since he did commit a damaging and wrong action, having 'taken the bait' from one or more of his sense doors, thus truly engaging in an offence, as a result, I did see him do it, and in turn became upset at him, and said those reproving and harsh words by chastising him. In retaliation, because this Bhikkhu was now upset at the way I treated him, he went and said those mean things about me to others. Then, when I learned of this myself, I became more upset, and in turn went and spoke badly about him to others.

'So, when you think about it, I was the one who made the situation a lot worse than it was!

'Therefore, I must be the one who goes to him, to apologize for what I have done. That way, I can simply put an end to this unpleasant and bitter situation between us, just like a merchant who owes fees to the King's men for importing goods into the kingdom.'

"This, Bhikkhus, is how the accusing Bhikkhu observes what is taking place within his heart, by reflecting carefully on the events that transpired.

"Now, know this, Bhikkhus, that as a result of this disciplinary issue, unless both the Bhikkhu who committed the offense and the accusing Bhikkhu do reflect on this matter and try to resolve it in this or similar manner, then it can surely be expected that this issue will escalate, and as a result, there will be more suffering and strife for a long time, for all Bhikkhus involved.

"However, if they resolve this disciplinary issue in the prescribed or similar manner, then it can be expected that this issue will not escalate, and there will not be any more suffering or strife experienced as a result of it, and the Bhikkhus will become relaxed again and dwell at ease."

16.

“Once, a certain brahmin approached The Blessed One, and after exchanging friendly greetings with Him, he went and sat to the side. Then, he addressed The Blessed One by saying:

“Good Sir, Gautama, why is it that some beings, when their bodies no longer become sustainable, at the moment of death, find themselves taking birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells?”

“Brahmin, by not having lived a virtuous life, with conduct that does not adhere to the principles of The Dhamma, beings instead go on engaging in actions that correspond to lower realms, and when their bodies no longer become sustainable at death, they find themselves taking birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells.

“However, brahmin, it must also be said that by living a virtuous life, with conduct that does adhere to the principles of The Dhamma, beings who engage in actions that correspond to the higher realms, when their bodies no longer become sustainable, at the moment of death, find themselves taking birth in places of ease and comfort, in happy and delightful states of existence, in the heavenly realms.”

“It is marvelous! It is truly wonderful!

“Master Gautama has clarified The Dhamma in many ways, as though He were to turn upright what had been turned upside-down, revealing what was hidden, showing the way to one who was lost, by holding up a lamp in the dark for those with eyesight to see.

“Bhante, I go to The Blessed One for refuge, and to The Dhamma, and to The Sangha of Bhikkhus. May The Blessed One accept me as his lay disciple, who has taken refuge in Him from today until the end of life.”

17.

Once, the brahmin Jāṇussoṇi came and approached The Blessed One, and after exchanging friendly greetings with Him, he sat down to one side. Then, he addressed The Blessed One by saying:

“Good Sir, Gautama, why is it that some beings, when their bodies no longer become sustainable, at the moment of death, find themselves taking birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells?”

“Brahmin, it is on account of things that they have done, and those things that they have not done, that when their bodies no longer become sustainable, once they die, beings find themselves taking birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells.”

“But, Good Sir, Gautama, why is it that with others, when their bodies no longer become sustainable, at the moment of death, they find themselves taking birth in places of ease and comfort, in happy and delightful states of existence, in the heavenly realms?”

“Brahmin, it is on account of things that they have done, and those things that they have not done, whereby those other beings, when their bodies no longer become sustainable, at the moment of death, find themselves taking birth in places of ease and comfort, in happy and delightful states of existence, in the heavenly realms.”

“Good Sir, Gautama, I must admit that I do not understand this explanation given to me in brief. Therefore, it would be wonderful if you could please explain it further, by clarifying what was just said, but in more detail.”

“Then, brahmin, listen carefully by paying close attention to what I shall say.”

“Yes, Sir,” replied the brahmin Jāṇussoṇi.

And The Blessed One continued instructing:

“Here, Brahmin, someone has lived without virtue by engaging in wrong intentional bodily actions that were damaging and harmful, while at the same time, not having done good and beneficial bodily actions. Similarly, he has engaged in wrong intentional speech and verbal actions that were damaging and harmful, while at the same time, not having engaged in good speech or beneficial verbal actions. And he has similarly engaged in wrong thinking and intentional mental actions that were damaging and harmful, while at the same time not having engaged in good thoughts or beneficial mental actions.

“So, you see, brahmin, it is on account of things that they have done, and those things that they have not done, that when their bodies no longer become sustainable, once they die, beings find themselves taking birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells.

“Meanwhile, brahmin, someone else has behaved virtuously by engaging in right intentional bodily actions that were beneficial, while at the same time not having done evil or damaging bodily actions. Similarly, he has already engaged in good intentional speech and verbal actions that were beneficial, while at the same time not having engaged in evil speech or damaging verbal actions. And he has similarly engaged in healthy thinking and good intentional mental actions that were beneficial, while at the same time not having engaged in evil thoughts or damaging mental actions.

“Here too, brahmin, you see that it is on account of things that they have done, and those things that they have not done, that when their bodies no longer become sustainable, once they die, beings find themselves taking birth in places of ease and comfort, in happy and delightful states of existence, in the heavenly realms.”

“It is marvelous! It truly is wonderful! Master Gautama has clarified The Dhamma in many ways, as though He placed upright what had been turned upside-down, revealing what was hidden, showing the correct path to one who was lost, holding up a lamp in the dark for those with eyesight to see.

“Bhante, I go to The Blessed One for refuge, and to The Dhamma, and to The Sangha of Bhikkhus. May The Blessed One accept me as his lay disciple, who has taken refuge in Him from today until the end of life.”

18.

Once, the Venerable Ānanda came and approached The Blessed One, and after paying homage to Him, he sat down to one side. Then, The Blessed One spoke, while addressing the Venerable Ānanda:

“Ānanda, I categorically and definitively state that one should not engage in any kind of misconduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech or communication, and through thought or mental actions.”

Then, the Venerable Ānanda asked The Blessed One, by saying:

“Bhante, seeing that The Blessed One has categorically and definitively stated that one should not engage in any kind of misconduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech or communication, and through thought or mental actions, then, what might be the dangerous or harmful outcomes to be expected for someone who has engaged in such damaging behaviors?”

“Ānanda, I categorically and definitively stated that one should not engage in any kind of misconduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech or communication, and through thought or mental actions, because if one has indeed engaged in such damaging behaviors, these dangerous and harmful outcomes are then to be expected –

1. The person is left with guilt and remorse, blaming himself;
2. Those who are truly wise, having carefully considered and investigated the matter, would turn and chastise that person by criticizing him, as they look down upon such behavior;
3. A bad reputation spreads about the person who has committed these actions;
4. One dies with a confused heart;
5. And with the body coming apart, after death, that person takes birth in places of misery, in horrible and miserable states of existence, in the hells.

“Therefore, Ānanda, I categorically and definitively state that one should not engage in any kind of misconduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech or communication, and through thought or mental actions. Otherwise, these dangerous and harmful outcomes are to be expected for someone who has engaged in such damaging behavior.

"On the other hand, Ānanda, I categorically and definitively state that one should engage in virtuous conduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech and all kinds of communication, and through thought and mental actions."

Then, the Venerable Ānanda asked The Blessed One, by saying:

"Bhante, seeing that The Blessed One has categorically and definitively stated that one should engage in virtuous conduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech and all kinds of communication, and through thought and mental actions, then, what might be the benefits or advantageous outcomes to be expected for someone who has engaged in such beneficial behaviors?"

"Ānanda, I categorically and definitively stated that one should engage in virtuous conduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech and all kinds of communication, and through thought and mental actions, because if one has indeed engaged in such beneficial behaviors, then these benefits and advantageous outcomes are to be expected –

1. The person feels neither guilt nor remorse, nor blames himself;
2. Those who are truly wise, having carefully considered and investigated the matter, would praise that person;
3. A good reputation spreads about the one who has committed these beneficial actions;
4. One dies with a heart that is calm and serene;
5. And with the body coming apart, after death, that person takes birth in places of ease and comfort, in happy and delightful states of existence, in the heavenly realms.

"Therefore, Ānanda, I categorically and definitively state that one should engage in virtuous conduct, whether done through the physical body, through speech and all kinds of communication, and through thought and mental actions, because, as a result, these benefits and advantageous outcomes are to be expected."

19.

"Bhikkhus, dispel and get rid of all that is damaging!

"For, it is absolutely possible to get rid of all that is damaging. After all, if it was not possible to get rid of all that is damaging, then I would not advise you by saying:

'Bhikkhus, dispel and get rid of all that is damaging!'

"But, because it is possible to get rid of them, I am telling you:

'Bhikkhus, dispel and get rid of all that is damaging!'

“This, because if dispelling and getting rid of all that is damaging were to be harmful in any way or somehow bring you suffering, then, certainly I would not be instructing and advising you to give them up and get rid of them!

“However, it is because dispelling and getting rid of all that is damaging is, in fact, so beneficial to you, bringing you genuine happiness and so many other advantages, that I will keep telling you:

‘Bhikkhus, dispel and get rid of all that is damaging!’

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial!

“For, it is absolutely possible to cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial. After all, if it was not possible to cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial, then I would not advise you by saying:

‘Bhikkhus, cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial!’

“But, because it is possible to cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial, I am telling you:

‘Bhikkhus, cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial!’

“This, because if cultivating and promoting all that is beneficial within you were to be harmful in any way or somehow bring you suffering, then, certainly I would not be instructing and advising you to cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial.

“However, it is because cultivating and promoting within you all that is beneficial is, in fact, so beneficial to you, bringing you genuine happiness and so many other advantages, that I will keep telling you:

‘Bhikkhus, cultivate and promote within you all that is beneficial!’”

20.

“Bhikkhus, these two things lead to the confusion and loss of this True and Beautiful Dhamma. Which two?

“One involves people misplacing or rearranging the words or phrases used in a discourse, to fit their own purpose; and the other is when they misinterpret the meaning of what was said in the Discourses, in order to fit their level of understanding, or to promote their own personal agendas or narratives.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two detrimental things that lead to the confusion and loss of this True and Beautiful Dhamma.

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, there are these two other things that lead to the maintenance of the natural lucidity, preservation, and thus continuation of this True and Beautiful Dhamma. Which two?

“One involves people correctly placing or arranging the words and phrases used in a discourse; and the other is when they correctly interpret the meaning of what was said in the Discourses, as intended, and not as it fits their individual level of understanding, or their own personal agendas and narratives.

“These, therefore, are the two supportive things that lead to the maintenance of the natural lucidity, preservation, and thus continuation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma.”

AN II

Suttas 21-31

Bāla Vagga

"The Section on Fools"

21.

"Fools are to be distinguished by their two types, Bhikkhus. What two?

"There is the fool who does not recognize that he has made a mistake, failing to see a misdeed as an actual misdeed. And there is the fool who does not accept the confession from the one who acknowledges his mistake, who comes asking for forgiveness according to The Dhamma.

"These, therefore, Bhikkhus, are the two types of fools.

"Conversely, the wise are to be distinguished by their two types as well, Bhikkhus. What two?

"There is the one who does recognize when he has made a mistake, by seeing a misdeed as an actual misdeed. And there is the wise person who accepts the confession from the one who acknowledges his mistake, who comes asking for forgiveness according to The Dhamma.

"These, therefore, Bhikkhus, are the two types of wise people."

22.

"Bhikkhus, these two individuals come to falsely represent The Tathāgata, by clouding His words. Which two?

"The resentful and contentiously wicked person, full of anger and hatred in his heart; and the person who blindly believes, without any proper understanding.

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two individuals come to falsely represent The Tathāgata by clouding His words.

23.

“Bhikkhus, these two characters distort the words spoken by The Tathāgata. Which two?

“The one who states and explains what was never uttered or explained by The Tathāgata, as having been taught by The Tathāgata, while the other states and explains what was indeed uttered and explained by The Tathāgata Himself, but while denying that they were ever spoken or taught by Him.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two characters distort the words spoken by The Tathāgata.

“On the other hand, these two individuals do not distort the words spoken by The Tathāgata. Which two?

“The one who states and explains what was never uttered or explained by The Tathāgata, as never having been spoken or taught by Him, in the first place. Meanwhile, the other states and explains what was truly uttered and explained by The Tathāgata Himself, as having been spoken and taught by Him, indeed.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these are the two individuals who do not distort the words spoken by The Tathāgata.”

24.

“Bhikkhus, these two characters go on falsifying and disfiguring the words spoken by The Tathāgata. Which two?

“The one who speaks on a deep discourse but while presenting it as self-explanatory and thus not needing further elaboration or a detailed presentation, claiming that it is already explicit, while it actually does need a detailed explanation. Meanwhile, the other speaks on a straightforward discourse, but while presenting it as one that requires a detailed presentation as he goes on twisting and mangling its meaning, when it was already explicit to begin with and thus truly self-explanatory.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two characters go on falsifying and disfiguring the words spoken by The Tathāgata.”

25.

“Bhikkhus, these two individuals do not falsify or disfigure the words spoken by The Tathāgata. Which two?

“The one who speaks in detail while carefully elaborating on a discourse, given the fact that the Discourse does indeed require further elaboration and a detailed presentation, seeing that it is not explicit.

“And the other individual speaks on a Discourse without going into too many details, while presenting it as one that does not require an exhaustive presentation or elaboration, seeing that the discourse itself is already explicit, and thus self-explanatory, to begin with.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two individuals do not falsify or disfigure the words spoken by The Tathāgata.”

26.

“Bhikkhus, whoever works to conceal his misdeeds by keeping them secret and hidden, should expect one of these two destinations once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the terrible realms of hell, or rebirth into the animal realm.

“In contrast, Bhikkhus, whoever does not conceal his misdeeds nor keeps them secret and hidden, should expect one of these two destinations once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the heavenly realms of delight and happiness, or rebirth into the human realm.”

27.

“Bhikkhus, the person with wrong views in his heart should expect one of these two destinations for himself once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the terrible realms of hell, or rebirth into the animal realm.”

28.

“Bhikkhus, the person possessing Right View in his heart should expect one of these two destinations for himself once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the delightful and happy realms of the Devas, or rebirth into the human realm.”

29.

“Bhikkhus, the person who lives without virtue, lacking any morality in his lifestyle, should expect one of these two destinations for himself once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the terrible realms of hell, or rebirth into the animal realm.”

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, the person who lives virtuously, supported by morality in his lifestyle, should expect one of these two destinations for himself once the body breaks down: either rebirth into the lovely and comfortable heavenly realms of the Devas, or rebirth into the human realm.”

30.

“Bhikkhus, having seen two great advantages in them, I frequently spend time secluded in remote jungle forests, and in wild, off-the beaten-path type of places, away from everything. Now, what are these two great advantages?

“One is for my own pleasant abiding here and now, and the other is out of compassion for future generations of practitioners, who will gain much from my example and thus become encouraged to also get away and seclude themselves in those remote and uninhabited areas, to gain these benefits as well.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, having seen these two great advantages, I frequently spend time secluded in remote jungle forests, and in wild, off-the beaten-path type of places, away from everything.”

31.

“Bhikkhus, these two things are on the side of wisdom, leading to and culminating in the attainment of Higher Knowledge and Understanding. Which two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the advantage or benefit of practicing and cultivating serene mental quietude?

“The Heart becomes developed, Bhikkhus.

“And what is the advantage or benefit of developing the Heart?

“The passion or lust in the heart is let go of and vanishes.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the advantage or benefit of practicing and cultivating penetrative insight?

“Wisdom becomes developed, Bhikkhus.

“And what is the advantage or benefit of developing wisdom?

“The ignorance in the heart is let go of and vanishes.

“After all, Bhikkhus, the heart that is in the grips of passions and lust is neither released nor free. Meanwhile, in the presence of ignorance, wisdom is corrupted and does not get the chance to grow nor develop into maturity.

“For this reason, Bhikkhus, with the spread of dispassion towards all things that trigger lust and obsession, and their actual fading away, comes the Release that is Freedom of the Heart.

“And, with the fading away of ignorance, comes the Release that is Freedom Through Wisdom.”

AN II

Suttas 32-41

Samacitta Vagga

"The Peaceful Heart"

32.

"Bhikkhus, I will speak to you about the internal atmosphere and overall functioning of the one declared to be 'the inferior and evil person,' and the internal atmosphere and overall functioning of the one declared to be 'the superior and good person.'

"Now, pay close attention to what I shall say, by listening carefully.

"Yes, Bhante!" The Bhikkhus replied.

And The Blessed One continued:

"And what is the internal atmosphere and overall functioning of the one considered to be 'the inferior and evil person?'

"The inferior and evil person is an ingrate, lacking any sense of appreciation or thankfulness. This, because to be ungrateful and unthankful is itself the badge and signature of the inferior and evil man. Thus, whoever functions within the internal atmosphere of these two rotten qualities, is himself an inferior and evil person.

"And what is the internal atmosphere and overall functioning of the one considered to be 'the superior and good person?'

"The superior and good person is full of gratitude, abounding with the sense of appreciation and thankfulness. This, because to be grateful and thankful is itself the badge and signature of the superior and good person. Thus, whoever functions within the internal atmosphere of these two uplifting qualities is himself a superior and good person."

33.

“Bhikkhus, I declare that there are these two persons, whom it is truly difficult to repay back for what they have done for you. And who are these two?

“It is one’s own mother and father.

“Bhikkhus, even if you were to carry your father upon one shoulder and your mother upon the other shoulder, as you take care of them by rubbing their weak bodies, anointing them with various oils and soothing balms; bathing them and massaging their limbs to relieve their aches and pains, and even if they were to defecate and urinate upon you while you carry them on your shoulders, and even if you were to have a long life of one hundred years, as you continuously treat them with such dedication and tender loving care, I declare to you, that you would still not have repaid them, still not able to reciprocate fully the love and care shown to you, by your parents!

“Even if you were to offer your parents all the wealth in the world, making them supreme rulers of this whole wide earth, completely decked with the seven treasures, you would still not have repaid them, still not able to reciprocate fully the love and care shown to you, by your parents! And what is the reason for this?

“It is because they have done much more for you, Bhikkhus! For, they were the ones who fed and took care of you when you could not even stand or walk or feed yourself. They brought you up and then showed you the world.

“However, Bhikkhus, if and when your parents are lacking in faith, and you put the effort to inspire them, encouraging and arousing faith in them, as you establish them firmly in it; if your parents are living without virtue, and you encourage and inspire them to become firmly established in virtuous conduct; if your parents are stingy and stuck in miserliness, living with a closed-handed attitude when it comes to sharing their possessions with those in need, and you encourage and inspire them to become generous, to be open-handed in liberally sharing their possessions with those in need; and if your parents are lacking in wisdom, and you inspire, encourage, and establish them firmly in wisdom, then, I declare that by doing these, you would have truly done much for them, indeed, so very much, in repaying your gratitude to them for all that they have done for you, and more!”

34.

Once, a certain brahmin approached The Blessed One, and after exchanging friendly greetings with Him, he sat down to one side and said:

“What is it that the Good Sir Gautama emphasizes in His teaching? What is it that He explains and elucidates?”

“Brahmin, what I emphasize in my teaching is the importance of engaging in certain actions, and abstaining to engage in certain other actions. This is what I explain and elucidate.

“And how does the Good Sir Gautama differentiate between engaging in certain actions while abstaining from others?”

“Brahmin, I emphasize and explain not engaging in behavior done by the physical body, one’s speech and communication, and through the mind, which brings about the experiencing of evil and damaging qualities.

“In contrast, brahmin, I also emphasize engaging in behavior done by the physical body, one’s speech and communication, and through the mind, which brings about the experiencing of good and beneficial qualities.

“This, brahmin, is how I differentiate between engaging in certain actions while abstaining from others.”

“It is excellent Good Sir Gautama! It is marvelous, Good Sir Gautama!

“The Good Sir Gautama has clarified The Dhamma for me in many ways, as though He turned upright what had been upside-down, revealing what was hidden, showing the way to one who was lost, holding up a lamp in the dark for those with eyesight to see.

“Bhante, I go to The Blessed One for refuge, and to The Dhamma, and to The Sangha of Bhikkhus. From this day forward, may The Blessed One remember me as a lay disciple who has taken refuge in Him, until the end of life.”

35.

At one time, the householder Anāthapiṇḍika came and approached The Blessed One, and after paying his respects by respectfully bowing to The Teacher, he went and sat to one side and said:

“Bhante, who in existence is truly worthy of receiving gifts and offerings? To whom should those with faith be giving their gifts?”

“There are in existence, householder, these two who are worthy of receiving gifts from the faithful: The Noble Disciples in Training and Those Nobles Disciples who have completed their Training.

“Therefore, householder, these are the ones who are worthy of receiving gifts and offerings. These are the ones to whom all those with faith should be giving their gifts.

Then, The Blessed One spoke further, but this time in verse, while saying:

"The Noble Disciple who has completed The Training, and
The Noble Disciple still in Training,
Are the ones truly worthy of gifts and offerings;
They indeed are the ones to whom those who give their heartfelt gifts should be giving,
For, they are the ones who live with honesty and unerring character,
Upright in actions they commit with their body, speech, and mind.
It is therefore these beings who are the genuine field of merits
To make one's offerings to,
For, they alone are the ones,
To whom those offerings
Will bring the greatest of rewards, indeed."

36.

I have personally heard this.

At one time, while The Blessed One was living at the monastery offered by Anāthapiṇḍika in Jeta's Park, in Sāvatthī, the Venerable Sāriputta was staying at the Pubba monastery, which was offered by Visakhā, the mother of Migāra, which was in Sāvatthī as well.

It was then that the Venerable Sāriputta addressed the Bhikkhus, by saying:

"Friends, Bhikkhus!"

"Yes, Friend!" Those Bhikkhus replied. And the Venerable Sāriputta continued by saying:

"I will teach you about the person fettered by internal shackles, and the person who is fettered by external shackles. Pay close attention to what I shall say by listening carefully."

"Yes, Friend!"

"Now, who is that person who is fettered by internal shackles?

"Here Friends, the Bhikkhu is virtuous, living ethically through restraint according to the Discipline Code of the Pātimokkha while training in it; conducting himself in right behavior, seeing the danger in committing even the slightest fault. Thus, he lives virtuously while adhering to the code of discipline.

"Once his body breaks down, after death, he is reborn in a certain company of Devas. Then, once his time runs out there, he disappears from there and returns back here, where he is reborn as a human, yet again.

"This person, Bhikkhus, being a 'returner,' is therefore considered to be the one fettered by internal shackles, because he comes back and is reborn as a human being, yet again.

“And who is that person who is fettered by external shackles?

“Here Friends, the Bhikkhu is virtuous, living ethically through restraint according to the Discipline Code of the Pātimokkha while training in it; conducting himself in right behavior, seeing the danger in committing even the slightest fault. Thus, he lives virtuously while adhering to the code of discipline.

“During the course of his practice, this Bhikkhu comes to attain to a certain level of the Heart’s Release, and then remains in that peaceful state.

“Now, once the body of this Bhikkhu breaks down, after death, he is reborn in a certain company of Devas. Then, once his time runs out there, he disappears from there but, being a Non-Returner already, he does not come back to the human realm, for he is to never be reborn as a human, ever again.

“As for this person, Bhikkhus, being a ‘non-returner,’ he is considered to be the one fettered by external shackles, because he does not come back as a human being again.

“And who could be that other person who is fettered by external shackles?

“Here Friends, the Bhikkhu is virtuous, living ethically through restraint according to the Discipline Code of the Pātimokkha while training in it; conducting himself in right behavior, seeing the danger in committing even the slightest fault. Thus, he lives virtuously while adhering to the code of discipline.

“Now, this Bhikkhu is one who is continuously practicing to experience disenchantment and dispassion towards all sensual stimulations, as he strives to attain to their utter end and cessation. Similarly, he is continuously practicing to experience disenchantment and dispassion towards the desire for rebecoming, as he strives to attain to its utter end and cessation.
Similarly, he is continuously practicing and striving to attain the utter end and cessation of craving itself, with its constant thirst for more.
And he is continuously practicing and striving to attain the complete end of greed.

“Now, once the body of this Bhikkhu breaks down, after death, he is reborn in a certain company of Devas. Then, once his time runs out there, he disappears from there but, being a Non-Returner already, he does not come back, for he too will never be reborn as a human, ever again.

“As for this person, Bhikkhus, seeing that he too is a ‘non-returner,’ he is considered to be fettered by external shackles, because he does not come back as a human being again.”

Meanwhile, numerous Devas from the group of celestial beings who share the same mind but inhabit different bodies, came and approached The Blessed One. Once they paid their respects by bowing to The Teacher, they softly touched the ground with their feet, and while standing to one side, they addressed The Blessed One by saying:

“At this very moment, Bhante, the Venerable Sāriputta is at the Pubba monastery teaching and explaining to the Bhikkhus there about the person fettered by internal shackles, and the person who is fettered by external shackles. Those gathered there listening to the Venerable Sāriputta are quite excitedly delighted in hearing him speak.

“Perhaps it would be good, Bhante, if The Blessed One were to approach the Venerable Sāriputta, out of compassion.”

And The Blessed One accepted through His silence.

Then, just as swiftly as a strong and agile man would quickly stretch out his bent arm or flex his outstretched arm, The Blessed One disappeared from Jeta’s grove and immediately reappeared before the Venerable Sāriputta at the Pubba monastery.

The Blessed One then sat on the seat that was prepared for Him, as the Venerable Sāriputta quickly began paying homage by bowing to his Teacher, and then sat to one side. And The Blessed One said:

“Sāriputta, just now, numerous Devas from the group of celestial beings who share the same mind but inhabit different bodies, came and approached me. Once they paid their respects by bowing to me, they softly touched the ground with their feet, and while standing to one side, they addressed me by saying:

‘At this very moment, Bhante, the Venerable Sāriputta is at the Pubba monastery teaching and explaining to the Bhikkhus about the person fettered by internal shackles, and the person who is fettered by external shackles. Those gathered there listening to the Venerable Sāriputta are quite excitedly delighted in hearing him speak.

‘Perhaps it would be good, Bhante, if The Blessed One were to approach the Venerable Sāriputta, out of compassion.’

“Now, Sāriputta, those same Devas presently stand together, as though fixed to the tip of a needle, clustered in groups of ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, sixty and seventy. But even though they are so tightly grouped and huddled together, they do not impinge upon each other nor hurt each other in any way, as they continue to stand.

“Sāriputta, you may start to think that those Devas have attained to non-agitated serenity and dwell so peacefully close together, due to some method or technique they learned or practiced in their Celestial realm, but that would not be a correct assumption on your part.

“After all, Sāriputta, they attained to that state right here, in the past, while they were still human beings, whereby they trained themselves to stand together, as though fixed to the tip of a needle, clustered in groups of ten, twenty, thirty, forty, fifty, sixty and seventy. But even though they are so tightly grouped and huddled together, they do not impinge upon each other nor hurt each other in any way, as they continue to stand.

“In this manner, Sāriputta, you must practice and train yourselves:

‘We too will train, so that we can attain to that peaceful serenity of our faculties, to experience a harmoniously peaceful mind, among each and every single one of us.’

“Therefore, it is in this manner that you must train yourselves.

“And when, Sāriputta, through your training you are able to attain to that peaceful serenity of your faculties, experiencing a harmoniously peaceful mind among each and every single one of you, then your bodily actions will also be serene and harmoniously peaceful; your speech will also be serene and harmoniously peaceful; and your thoughts too will be serene and harmoniously peaceful, towards each and every companion you have in the Holy Life.

“Therefore, it is in this way, Sāriputta, that you must all train yourselves.

“I declare, Sāriputta, that all those other practitioners who have gone forth following other religious paths and faiths, are truly lost, simply because they have again missed such a great opportunity by not having listened to This Dhamma and Its explanation.”

37.

I have personally heard this.

At one time, the Venerable Mahākaccāna was living in Varaṇā, on the bank of the Kaddama Lake.

Then, the brahmin Ārāmadaṇḍa came and approached the Venerable Mahākaccāna, and after exchanging friendly greetings with him, he sat down to one side and asked the Venerable Mahākaccāna this question:

“Good Sir, Kaccāna, what is the cause, what is the reason that Khattiya warriors keep arguing and fighting with other warriors; that brahmins also keep arguing and fighting with other brahmins; and similarly, householder merchants keep arguing and fighting with other householder merchants?”

“It is, brahmin, because of the passions that exist in the heart towards sensual stimulation, because of being slaves to it, identified with it, obsessed with it, being blindly and obediently subservient to sensual pleasures and stimulated by them, that Khattiya warriors keep arguing and fighting with other warriors. The same with the brahmins, who keep arguing and fighting with other brahmins, and similarly with householder merchants, who also keep arguing and fighting with other householder merchants.”

“But, Good Sir, Kaccāna, how about the recluses? What is the cause, what is the reason that they too keep arguing and fighting with other recluses?”

“It is, brahmin, because of the passions that exist in the heart drenched in wrong views, because of being slaves to them, getting identified with them, being obsessed by them, and blindly and obediently subservient to wrong views, that some recluses also keep arguing and fighting with other recluses.”

“In that case, Good Sir, Kaccāna, could there be a person living in this world, who has destroyed and gone beyond such passions, by overcoming those debased tendencies of being a slave to wrong views, and thus no longer identified with any wrong view, nor obsessed with them, neither blindly nor obediently subservient to any wrong view?”

“There is, indeed, such a person, O brahmin!

“There certainly is a Person living in this world, who has indeed transcended and gone beyond such passions, by overcoming those debased tendencies of being a slave to wrong views, and thus no longer identified with any such things, nor obsessed with them, neither blindly nor obediently subservient to any wrong view.

“Who is that person, O Good Sir, Kaccāna? Who might that person be, O Good Sir?”

“Brahmin, in the eastern state there is a city called Sāvatthi, where The Blessed One lives, The Arahant, The Supremely and Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha!

“It is He who has indeed destroyed all passions of the heart, by completely overcoming wrong views and all debased tendencies of being a slave to wrong views, and thus He is no longer identified with any wrong view, nor obsessed with them, neither blindly nor obediently subservient to any wrong view.”

When this was said, the brahmin Ārāmadaṇḍa got up from his seat, arranged his robe over one shoulder, put his right knee on the ground, and by bringing his joined palms in the direction which The Blessed One was, made this heartfelt utterance three times:

“Homage to The Blessed One, The Arahant, The Supremely and Perfectly Self-Awakened One!
Homage to The Blessed One, The Arahant, The Supremely and Perfectly Self-Awakened One!
Homage to The Blessed One, The Arahant, The Supremely and Perfectly Self-Awakened One!”

“Indeed, what a joy I feel in my heart! What an absolute delight, to know that The Blessed One has truly destroyed all the passions of the heart, by completely overcoming wrong views and all debased tendencies of being a slave to wrong views, and thus is no longer identified with any wrong views, nor obsessed with them, neither blindly nor obediently subservient to any wrong view!

“It is excellent, Master Kaccāna! It is indeed marvelous, Master Kaccāna!

“I feel as though Master Kaccāna has turned upright what was overturned, revealing what was hidden, showing the correct path to someone who was lost, as though one were to bring a lamp into the darkness, for all those with eyesight to see.

“Master Kaccāna has made The Dhamma clear to me in many ways!

“I now go for refuge to The Blessed One, to The Dhamma, and to The Sangha of Bhikkhus. May Master Kaccāna recognize me as a lay disciple, who has taken refuge in The Blessed One, from today until the end of life.”

38.

Once, while the Venerable Kaccāna was living at Gundā’s Park, the brahmin Kandarāyana approached, and after exchanging friendly greetings with the Venerable Kaccāna, he sat to one side and said:

“Good Sir, Kaccāna, I have heard the following report about you:

‘The recluse Kaccāna does not pay homage to, nor worships, nor respects elders; he does not offer a seat nor stands out of respect, nor bows down to brahmin elders, who are advanced in years, burdened by age, having come to the end of their lives.’

“And now, I see that this indeed is true! For, the recluse Kaccāna does not pay homage to, nor worships, nor respects brahmin elders, as I see him not offering a seat nor standing out of respect, nor bowing down to brahmin elders, who are advanced in years, burdened by age, having come to the end of their lives.

“Now, Good Sir, Kaccāna, is this truly an appropriate behavior to show to an elder?”

“Brahmin, The Blessed One who knows and sees, The Arahant, The Supremely and Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha, has clearly shown who truly is ‘an Elder,’ as distinguished from the foolish, undeveloped and ‘juvenile person.’

“Brahmin, even though someone may be biologically old and with age, such as eighty, ninety, or even a hundred years advanced since birth, and yet if he still continues enjoying and being gratified by the pursuit of sensual stimulation and their pleasures; still delighting in being surrounded by them; possessing a heart full of passions for them, consumed by sensual thoughts; still feverish in his desire to go after and seek out more sensual stimulation, then he is identified as no more than a foolish, undeveloped, and juvenile person, and not much else!

“On the other hand, brahmin, there might be someone who is biologically young and in the prime of his physical life, still quite young, with dark black hair and without a single grey hair in sight, being in the youthful first stage of life.

“Now, this younger person, albeit possessing far fewer years in age, if he does not continue enjoying nor being gratified by the pursuit of sensual stimulations and their pleasures; if he has given up delighting in being surrounded by them, with a heart that is empty of passions for them; no longer consumed by sensual thoughts; no more feverish and without the desire to go after and seek out more sensual stimulations, then he is identified as a wise Elder, the one who is truly deserving of respect."

When this was said, the brahmin Kandarāyana got up from his seat, arranged his robe over one shoulder and by approaching the Venerable Kaccāna, lowered his head and with it touched the feet of the Venerable Kaccāna, and said:

"Truly, Good Sirs! You indeed are the 'Elders!' For, you are the ones who stand strong and wise on the side of maturity and respect, while we, on the other hand, the 'juvenile youngsters,' stand on the side of immaturity, surely and most definitely owing you our deepest respect!

"It is excellent, Master Kaccāna! It is marvelous, Master Kaccāna!

"I feel as though Master Kaccāna has turned upright what was overturned, revealing what was hidden, showing the correct path to someone who was lost, as though one were to bring a lamp into the darkness for all those with eyesight to see.

"Master Kaccāna has made The Dhamma clear to me in many ways!

"I now go for refuge to The Blessed One, to The Dhamma, and to The Sangha of Bhikkhus. May Master Kaccāna recognize me as a lay disciple, who has taken refuge in The Blessed One, from today until the end of life."

39.

"Bhikkhus, when thieves and robbers are strong and powerful, while kings and rulers become weak and powerless, then life itself becomes very difficult. One enters and exits regions and cities with much fear and worry, for the risk of danger is everywhere, even for the basic requirements of life, such as going to work and obtaining one's own sustenance.

"In the same way, Bhikkhus, when those evil and sneaky Bhikkhus become the majority, living without any Sīla or virtue, meanwhile the good and virtuous Bhikkhus become the minority, in facing enormous difficulties, those virtuous Bhikkhus either choose to quietly live the rest of their days somewhere in the midst of The Sangha, or they leave such surroundings and go someplace far, away from the corruptions and distortions they witness being done by evil Bhikkhus and their supporters, to This True and Beautiful Dhamma.

"Such times, indeed, Bhikkhus, will be to the detriment and harm of so many people and other beings! For, it will lead to the ruin, suffering, and unhappiness of many, both Devas and humans combined!"

"But, when thieves and robbers are weak and powerless, while kings and rulers become strong and powerful, then life itself becomes very easy and enjoyable. One enters and exits regions and cities without any fear or worry, for the risk of danger is nowhere to be found, where people go about their lives with comfort and much ease, as they tend to their work and obtain their sustenance.

“In the same way, Bhikkhus, when the good and honest Bhikkhus become the majority, living virtuously with Sīla, meanwhile the evil, non-virtuous, and sneaky Bhikkhus become the minority, then this latter group of monks will either choose to quietly live somewhere in the midst of The Sangha, or they will disrobe or leave such holy surroundings and go somewhere far, away from the upright and steadfast majority of Bhikkhus and their supporters, who protect and live according to This True and Beautiful Dhamma.

“Such times, indeed, Bhikkhus, will be for the enormous benefit and wellbeing of so many people and other beings! For, it will lead to the protection, support, and happiness of many, both Devas and humans combined!”

40.

“Bhikkhus, wrong practice is wrong practice, regardless of whether the person engaging in it is a layperson or a recluse who has gone forth. Therefore, there are no benefits whatsoever, in engaging in wrong practice, which is why I never praise or appreciate it.

“This, because, Bhikkhus, wrong practice does not lead either the layperson nor the recluse who has gone forth, to the successful completion of The Training. It simply does not take you to whatever that is wholesome and good, because it is the wrong training, for it is based on unwholesome teachings.”

“However, Bhikkhus, right practice is the right practice, regardless of whether the person engaging in it is a layperson or a recluse who has gone forth. Therefore, the benefits are countless for whoever it is that engages in the right practice, which is why I praise and appreciate it.

“This, because, Bhikkhus, the right practice does lead both the layperson and the recluse who has gone forth, to the successful completion of The Training. It simply does take you to all that is wholesome and good, because it is indeed the Right Training, for it is none other than The Wholesome Dhamma.”

41.

“Bhikkhus, those Bhikkhus who alter or remove all those discourses that are the true Dhamma, along with their real meanings, and replace them with fake and counterfeit discourses that they make up, as they change the meaning of The Dhamma itself, are playing with the lives of so many people, negatively affecting their wellbeing in such harmful and damaging ways that are far reaching and long lasting.

“Such evil Bhikkhus are working to the detriment of so many beings, taking away the happiness and wellbeing of both Devas and humans combined. As a result, these Bhikkhus are generating and will continue to generate much harmful, damaging, and painful consequences by the devastation they are causing, which is leading to the demise and disappearance of This Good and Beautiful Dhamma.

“But, Bhikkhus, those Bhikkhus who uncover and highlight all those discourses that are the true Dhamma, along with their real meanings, as they bring attention to them, while also keeping all fake and counterfeit discourses out by exposing their flawed and evil impact, as they preserve the meaning of The Dhamma itself, are truly protecting the lives of so many people, positively enhancing their wellbeing in such helpful and supportive ways, that are far reaching and long lasting.

“Such good Bhikkhus are working for the betterment and welfare of so many beings, ensuring the path to happiness and wellbeing for both Devas and humans combined. As a result, these Bhikkhus are generating and will continue to generate much good merit-making and lovely outcomes by the enormous benefit they are causing, which is preserving and maintaining the long and healthy life of This Good and Beautiful Dhamma.”

AN II

Suttas 42-51

Parisa Vagga

"The Section on Gatherings"

42.

"Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. Which two?

"The empty or useless gathering and the meaningfully deep gathering.

"Now what, Bhikkhus, is the empty or useless gathering?

"Here, Bhikkhus, in such a gathering the Bhikkhus are arrogant, conceited, haughty, puffed up and vain, restless in their bodies, with loose talk, muddled and cloudy in the mind, without any mindful awareness, all emotionally scattered and with uncontrolled mental faculties. In this way, such a gathering is considered to be empty of substance and utterly useless.

"And what, Bhikkhus, is the meaningfully deep gathering?

"Bhikkhus, in such a gathering the Bhikkhus are accommodating, warm and considerate, kind and full of genuine humility, with a clear mind, down-to-earth and approachable in their attitude, with mindful awareness, speaking slowly and with mettā when intending to communicate, emotionally stable and serene, and controlled in their mental faculties. In this way, such a gathering is considered to be a meaningfully deep and rich with substance.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. Now, out of these two, the meaningfully deep gathering is indeed the greatest."

43.

"Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. Which two?

"The divided gathering and the united gathering.

"Now what, Bhikkhus, is the divided gathering?

“Bhikkhus, when a gathering of Bhikkhus finds them quarreling, arguing, fighting with each other, where they keep throwing their sharp words at each other, using verbal daggers to hurt and abuse one another, then that is considered a divided gathering.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the united gathering?

“Here, Bhikkhus, when a gathering of Bhikkhus finds them being considerate and respectful towards each other; harmoniously using warm gestures and modes of communication where they acknowledge each other; showing appreciation and regard, as they converse with each other joyfully and with respect; looking at each other with kindly eyes, then that is considered a united gathering.”

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the united gathering is indeed the greatest.”

44.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. Which two?

“The rotten gathering and the excellent gathering.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the rotten gathering?

“Bhikkhus, there is the gathering where the senior-most Bhikkhus live in luxury and opulence, with so much abundance surrounding them, where they live without The Dhamma in their hearts; drenched in lethargy and careless about The Training, they continuously deviate from the teachings; giving up seclusion, they do not make any effort to pursue that which is yet to be attained, and to realize the Goal of this Holy Life that is yet to be realized. Thus, they serve as rotten and decrepit examples of a recluse, which then the younger Bhikkhus emulate.

“Now, as expected, in witnessing the neglect and indifference demonstrated by the senior Bhikkhus towards living the Holy Life proper, the next generation of Bhikkhus also yearns for and makes it their goal to strive to live in luxury and opulence, with so much abundance surrounding them, where they live without The Dhamma in their hearts; drenched in lethargy and careless about the Training, as they too continuously deviate from the teachings; giving up seclusion, they do not make any effort to pursue that which is yet to be attained; to realize the Goal of this Holy Life that is yet to be realized. Thus, they all serve as rotten and decrepit examples of what a true Bhikkhu is, and how he should really live and strive.

“This therefore, Bhikkhus, is the rotten gathering.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the excellent gathering?

“Bhikkhus, there is the gathering where the senior-most Bhikkhus do not live in luxury nor opulence, nor look for abundance to surround them with, as they live with The Dhamma in their hearts; drenched in resolute commitment and heedful dedication to The Training, they continuously maintain their strong adherence to The Teaching and become inspired by it constantly; rejoicing in seclusion, they are always engaged in the effortful pursuit to attain that which is yet to be attained, and to realize the Goal of this Holy Life that is yet to be realized. Thus, they serve as excellent examples of being a true recluse, which then the younger Bhikkhus emulate with delight.

“Now, in witnessing the attention and care demonstrated by the senior Bhikkhus towards living the Holy Life proper, the next generation of Bhikkhus also does not live in luxury nor opulence, nor looks for abundance to surround themselves with, as they too live with The Dhamma in their hearts; drenched in resolute commitment and heedful dedication to The Training, they continuously maintain their strong adherence to The Teaching and become inspired by it constantly; rejoicing in seclusion, they are always engaged in the effortful pursuit to attain that which is yet to be attained, and to realize the Goal of this Holy Life that is yet to be realized. Thus, they serve as excellent examples of what a true Bhikkhu is, and how he should really live and strive.

“This therefore, Bhikkhus, is the excellent gathering.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the excellent gathering is indeed the greatest.”

45.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The obscene gathering and the noble gathering.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the obscene gathering?

“Bhikkhus, there is a gathering that has within it Bhikkhus assembled, who do not know as it really is – this is suffering, this is the arising and origin of suffering, this is the cessation of suffering, and this is the Path leading to the cessation of suffering. Therefore, this is the obscene gathering.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the noble gathering?”

“Bhikkhus, there is a gathering that has within it Bhikkhus assembled, who do know as it really is – this is suffering, this is the arising and origin of suffering, this is the cessation of suffering, and this is the Path leading to the cessation of suffering. Therefore, this is the noble gathering.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the noble gathering is indeed the greatest.”

46.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The disgustingly filthy gathering, and the very cream of all gatherings.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the disgustingly filthy gathering?

“Bhikkhus, a gathering where the Bhikkhus are driven and instigated by greed, lusting after and desiring some profit or gain in their behavior; where they are driven and instigated by anger and hatred in their behavior; where they are driven and instigated by delusion in their behavior; and where they are driven and instigated by cowardice in their behavior; that assembly of spineless Bhikkhus, therefore, is recognized as a disgustingly filthy gathering.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the very cream of all gatherings?

“Bhikkhus, a gathering where the Bhikkhus are neither driven nor instigated by desiring some profit or gain in their behavior; where they are neither driven nor instigated by anger or hatred in their behavior; where they are neither driven nor instigated by delusion in their behavior; and where they are neither driven nor instigated by cowardice in their behavior; that assembly of courageously fearless Bhikkhus, therefore, is truly recognized as the very cream of all gatherings.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the very cream of all gatherings is indeed the greatest.”

47.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The gathering that is engaged in pointless talk, where no discussion about The Dhamma ever takes place, and the gathering where all talk is about The Dhamma, and where no pointless talk could ever take place.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that is engaged in pointless talk, where no discussion about The Dhamma ever takes place?

“Bhikkhus, it is the gathering where the assembled Bhikkhus are neither interested nor want to listen to the deeply insightful suttas, especially those that deal with the supramundane, nor to discuss the transcendental nature of phenomena, such as those discourses that pertain to experiencing the emptiness or the voidness in all things as taught by The Tathāgata. Thus, even when such suttas are recited, taught or explained, these Bhikkhus do not lend an ear to try to understand the depth of The Dhamma found in them. This, because in their foolish arrogance, they presume that they have learned enough, and that these discourses are not necessary to be studied or learned.

“Instead, however, they go on listening eagerly to verses that are composed by others and outsiders; seeking out phrases and poetic expressions and ornately structured words and phrases that make them feel a certain way, such as beautifully arranged, sequenced, and delightful sounding expressions that undulate and thus please the ears, filling up the heart and body with high emotionality in their expressive overtones.

“It is this kind of suttas that they find worthy of memorizing and reciting, showing off their musicality as they chant. As a result, they learn and focus only on those verses composed by others, poets and outsiders, with their poetic expressions and beautifully arranged sequences that delight the ear. But even after having learned and memorized these, they still are not eager to probe them, to question and interrogate as to what is meant by those phrases and words. So, they live satisfied in being indifferent and uninterested to delve deeper, or to examine and uncover any possible hidden meanings that might be laying there behind those words that they learned. In this manner, they remain ignorant and unable to remove any doubts from the heart, given their lack of true knowledge and understanding of any Dhamma, their lack in desiring to uncover and understand any Dhamma, let alone to truly taste The Dhamma.

“This, therefore, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that is engaged in pointless talk, where no discussion about The Dhamma ever takes place.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering where all talk is about The Dhamma, and where no pointless talk could ever take place?

“Bhikkhus, it is the gathering where the assembled Bhikkhus are neither interested nor want to listen to any verses composed by others, poets, or outsiders, while considering their poetic expressions and beautifully arranged sequences, that delight the ear of putujjanas, simply a waste of time. Therefore, they shun listening to, let alone trying to learn or memorize, phrases and poetic expressions and other ornately structured words and phrases that make an average person feel a certain way, filling up the heart and body with high emotionality in their expressive overtones. In this manner, these Bhikkhus are not interested in such verses.

“Instead, they keep seeking out and find discourses that were actually taught by The Tathāgata, and not those ones weaved together by some poet or commentator. Thus, they go on listening eagerly to the deeply insightful suttas, especially those that deal with the supramundane, as well as discussing the transcendental nature of phenomena, such as those discourses that pertain to experiencing emptiness or the voidness in all things, as taught by The Tathāgata.

“Thus, when such suttas are being recited, taught or explained, they are fully present, listening not only with their ears but with their hearts, trying to learn and understand the depth of The Dhamma in them! This, because in their fervent thirst for The Dhamma, they know there is much to study and learn, so as to understand and benefit from such deeply rich suttas.

“As a result, they learn and focus only on the discourses of The Noble Ones, not the poets, or outsiders. By actively engaging in listening and learning, they then question and examine their meanings, the intended message and teachings found within those discourses, as they try to penetrate and gain a better understanding of The Dhamma. Thus, after having learned and memorized these suttas and the phrases presented in them, they continue to probe further, examining by questioning each other with genuine curiosity and fervent thirst, to uncover any possible hidden meanings that might be laying there behind those words that they learned, which they then apply into their practice immediately.

“In this manner, they continuously grow in their understanding and penetrative wisdom, and thus are able to remove any doubts from the heart, given their wealth of true knowledge and understanding of The Dhamma, their drive and purity of heart in wanting to keep finding out what they still do not know about The Dhamma, as a result of which, in time they come to truly taste The Dhamma.

“This, therefore, Bhikkhus, is the gathering where all talk is about The Dhamma, and where no pointless talk could ever take place.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the gathering where all talk is about The Dhamma and where no pointless talk could ever take place, is indeed the greatest.”

48.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“First, you have the gathering that venerates and pursues worldly things and those that bring physical pleasure and gratification, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of The True and Good Dhamma. Secondly, there is the gathering that venerates and pursues The True and Good Dhamma, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of worldly things and those that pertain to physical pleasure.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that venerates and pursues worldly things and those that bring physical pleasure and gratification, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of The True and Good Dhamma?

“Here, Bhikkhus, in a gathering the Bhikkhus go on praising each other for their attainments, but do so, in the presence of the lay people wearing white clothes. Thus, seeking to impress, they go on shamelessly making declarations about themselves and each other:

'Such and such a Bhikkhu is liberated by both methods; that other Bhikkhu is liberated through wisdom; the other one is a 'body witness;' whereas that other Bhikkhu has attained to Right View; the other one over there, is liberated through Faith; that one with such and such a name, is a Dhamma follower; the other Bhikkhu follows through his faith; meanwhile, that one over there is virtuous, and of good behavior; the other Bhikkhu there is without any virtue, an immoral man, possessing a bad and evil character!'

"Thus, in their scheme, they go on making such empty claims and declarations about themselves and each other, as a strategy for them to receive more support. So, in their lust for gain, power, prestige, recognition, and carnal pleasures and their gratification, they come to worship and venerate whatever they are offered; swooned with their lust to have and hold, becoming infatuated and obsessed by them, not realizing the terrifying danger hidden in them, and therefore, not recognizing the value and importance of stepping out and escape from all such nonsense. In this manner, Bhikkhus, such a gathering of Bhikkhus is one that venerates and pursues worldly things and those that bring physical pleasure and gratification, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of The True and Good Dhamma.

"And what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that venerates and pursues The True and Good Dhamma, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of worldly things and those that pertain to physical pleasure?

"Here, Bhikkhus, in such a gathering the Bhikkhus do not praise each other for their attainments, in the presence of the lay people wearing white clothes. For they are beyond the infantile need to impress, hence, they do not shamelessly make any declarations about themselves or each other, such as:

'Such and such a Bhikkhu is liberated by both methods; that other Bhikkhu is liberated through wisdom; the other one is a 'body witness;' whereas that other Bhikkhu has attained to Right View; the other one over there, is liberated through Faith; that one with such and such a name, is a Dhamma follower; the other Bhikkhu follows through his faith; meanwhile, that one over there is virtuous, and of good behavior; the other Bhikkhu there is without any virtue, an immoral man, possessing a bad and evil character!'

"Thus, they do not scheme, nor go on making such empty claims or declarations either about themselves or each other, as some kind of a strategy for them to receive more support. They do no such thing! This, because they do not possess any lust in their hearts for gain, power, prestige, or recognition, and especially no desire for carnal pleasures nor their gratification. In this way, they simply view whatever they receive as no more than mere utilitarian in their value; neither holding on to them, nor becoming infatuated or obsessed by them, for they clearly see the terrifying danger hidden in them, and therefore, have already recognized the value and importance of stepping out and the very escape from all such nonsense. In this manner, Bhikkhus, such a gathering of Bhikkhus is one that venerates and pursues The True and Good Dhamma, meanwhile giving up the pursuit and veneration of worldly things and those that pertain to physical pleasure.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the gathering that venerates and pursues The True and Good Dhamma, meanwhile gives up the pursuit and veneration of worldly things and those that pertain to physical pleasure, is indeed, the gathering that is the greatest.”

49.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The unlawful and chaotic gathering, and the gathering that is lawful and well-balanced.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the unlawful and chaotic gathering?

“Bhikkhus, in such a gathering, unlawful activities take place where confusion prevails, as clearly defined disciplinary proceedings are not followed in accordance with The Dhamma and The Vinaya, the way they should be. Instead, participants engage in behaving and conducting proceedings that go against The Dhamma and The Vinaya.

“Furthermore, they explain and elaborate on disciplinary proceedings that are incongruent with the teachings, but present them as being more valuable and important than what is supposed to be followed as per The Dhamma and The Vinaya, taught by The Tathāgata. Thus, unlawful discipline prevails while lawful discipline is ignored. Unlawful activity and discipline become the norm, as they keep enacting disciplinary acts which go contrary to the Vinaya, while those lawful disciplinary acts that are in agreement with the Vinaya are discarded, not enacted, and in time fully tossed out. This, therefore, is the unlawful and chaotic gathering.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the lawful and well-balanced gathering?

“In such a gathering, Bhikkhus, lawful activities take place, where clarity and proper protocol prevail, as clearly defined disciplinary proceedings are followed in accordance with The Dhamma and The Vinaya, the way they should be. Thus, participants engage in behaving and conducting proceedings that take place in harmony and are congruent with The Dhamma and The Vinaya.

“Furthermore, they explain and elaborate on disciplinary proceedings that are perfectly in line with the teachings, by presenting them as lawful and legitimate structures to protect The Sangha, and therefore as valuable and important, and thus to be followed as per The Dhamma and The Vinaya, taught by The Tathāgata. In this manner, lawful discipline prevails while unlawful discipline does not. Lawful activity and discipline become the norm, as they continue enacting disciplinary acts that are in agreement with the Vinaya, while those unlawful disciplinary acts being suggested or argued for that go contrary to the Vinaya are discarded, not enacted, and immediately tossed out. This, therefore, is the lawful and well-balanced gathering.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the gathering that is lawful and well-balanced is indeed the greatest.”

50.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The gathering that exists and functions against The Dhamma, and the gathering that exists and functions for and according to The Dhamma.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that exists and functions against The Dhamma?

“Bhikkhus, in such a gathering, unlawful activities take place, where confusion prevails, as clearly defined disciplinary proceedings are not followed in accordance with The Dhamma and The Vinaya, the way they should be. Instead, participants engage in behaving and conducting proceedings that go against The Dhamma and The Vinaya.

“Furthermore, they explain and elaborate on disciplinary proceedings that are incongruent with the teachings, but present them as being more valuable and important than what is supposed to be followed as per The Dhamma and The Vinaya, taught by The Tathāgata. Thus, unlawful discipline prevails while lawful discipline does not. Unlawful activity and discipline become the norm, as they keep enacting disciplinary acts that go contrary to the Vinaya, while those lawful disciplinary acts that are in agreement with the Vinaya are discarded, not enacted, and in time fully tossed out. This, therefore, is the gathering that exists and functions against The Dhamma.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that exists and functions for and according to The Dhamma?

“In such a gathering, Bhikkhus, lawful activities take place, where clarity and proper protocol prevail, as clearly defined disciplinary proceedings are followed in accordance with The Dhamma and The Vinaya, the way they should be. Thus, participants engage in behaving and conducting proceedings that take place in harmony and are congruent with The Dhamma and The Vinaya.

“Furthermore, they explain and elaborate on disciplinary proceedings that are perfectly in line with the teachings, by presenting them as lawful and legitimate structures to protect The Sangha, and therefore as valuable and important, and thus to be followed as per The Dhamma and The Vinaya, taught by The Tathāgata. In this manner, lawful discipline prevails while unlawful discipline does not. Lawful activity and discipline become the norm, as they continue enacting disciplinary acts that are in agreement with the Vinaya, while those unlawful disciplinary acts being suggested or argued for that go contrary to the Vinaya are discarded, not enacted, and immediately tossed out. This, therefore, is the gathering that exists and functions for and according to The Dhamma.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings. And out of these two, the gathering that exists and functions for and according to The Dhamma is indeed the greatest.”

51.

“Bhikkhus, there are two types of gatherings. What two?

“The gathering that speaks adhamma (what is non-Dhamma), and behaves against The Dhamma; and the gathering that speaks what is Dhamma, while behaving according to The Dhamma.

“Now what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that speaks adhamma (what is non-Dhamma), and behaves against The Dhamma?

“Bhikkhus, in such a gathering, the Bhikkhus dissent by disagreeing with some disciplinary issue, whether lawfully justified or not. As a result, the Bhikkhus adopt a hands-off and a non-interventionist attitude while they do not even try to speak to the disagreeing party, to express concern or reach a conclusive agreement in accordance with The Dhamma. Thus, each side leaves the other side be, in their desire to not intervene, as they placate without trying to convince each other or talk reason.

“Thus, in the absence of right view on either side, everyone holds on tenaciously to their wrong views, instead of attempting to rationally and reasonably challenge the conclusion that goes contrary to The Dhamma. In this way, the disciplinary issue gets left ‘as is’ and unaddressed, while each side proclaims: ‘I know my position is correct, while theirs’ is absolutely wrong!’

“This, therefore, Bhikkhus, is called the gathering that speaks adhamma (what is non-Dhamma), and behaves against The Dhamma.

“And what, Bhikkhus, is the gathering that speaks what is Dhamma, and behaves according to The Dhamma?

“Bhikkhus, in such a gathering, the Bhikkhus dissent by disagreeing with some disciplinary issue, whether lawfully justified or not. As a result, the Bhikkhus get to work by addressing the issue with sufficient interest and concern to settle the matter in a harmonious and reasonable manner. Thus, they try to speak to the disagreeing party, to express concern or reach a conclusive agreement in accordance with The Dhamma. In this way, through proper protocol and consideration, along with their power of listening and persuasion, they reach an agreement that is satisfactory to all parties involved, having put the necessary effort to try and reason and thus convince each other.

“Thus, in the presence of Right View on both sides, no one holds on tenaciously to any wrong view for long, and instead, they attempt to rationally and reasonably challenge the conclusion that goes contrary to The Dhamma, all while working for the perpetuation of The Good and True Dhamma and Vinaya. In this way, the disciplinary issue is appropriately addressed, as none of the opposing sides would proclaim: 'I know my position is correct, while theirs' is absolutely wrong!'

"This, therefore, Bhikkhus, is called the gathering that speaks what is Dhamma, while behaving according to The Dhamma.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two types of gatherings.

"And out of these two, the gathering that speaks what is Dhamma, and behaves according to The Dhamma, is indeed the greatest."

AN II

Suttas 52-63

Puggala Vagga

"The Section on People"

52.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two people who appear in the world, born for the welfare and benefit of countless people; bringing good fortune, happiness, and joy to the many; pervading a sense of soothing contentment and delight upon both Devas and humans. And who are these two?

"One is The Tathāgata, The Arahant, The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha; and the other is the Universal Wheel-Turning Monarch.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two people who appear in the world, born for the welfare and benefit of countless people; bringing good fortune, happiness, and joy to the many; pervading a sense of soothing contentment and delight upon both Devas and humans."

53.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two extremely unique and matchless human beings who appear in the world, born for the welfare and benefit of countless people; bringing good fortune, happiness, and joy to the many; pervading a sense of soothing contentment and delight upon both Devas and humans. And who are these two?

"One is The Tathāgata, The Arahant, The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha; and the other is the Universal Wheel-Turning Monarch.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two extremely unique and matchless human beings who appear in the world, born for the welfare and benefit of countless people; bringing good fortune, happiness, and joy to the many; pervading a sense of soothing contentment and delight upon both Devas and humans."

54.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two people whose death is mourned and lamented over by countless beings throughout the cosmos. And who are these two?

“One is The Tathāgata, The Arahant, The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha; and the other is the Universal Wheel-Turning Monarch.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two people whose death is mourned and lamented over by countless beings throughout the cosmos.”

55.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two people who are certainly worthy of stupas and shrines to be constructed for them, to house their relics. And who are these two?

“One is The Tathāgata, The Arahant, The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha; and the other is the Universal Wheel-Turning Monarch.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two people who are certainly worthy of stupas and shrines to be constructed for them, to house their relics.”

56.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of Buddhas. Who are the two?

“One is The Tathāgata, The Arahant, The Perfectly Self-Awakened Buddha; and the other is the Paccekabuddha, who is a silent or non-teaching Buddha.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two types of Buddhas.”

57.

“Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings. Which two?

“One is a Bhikkhu, who has destroyed his heart’s contaminants (āsavas); and the other is a thoroughbred tusker elephant.

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings."

58.

"Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings. Which two?

"One is a Bhikkhu who has destroyed his heart's contaminants (āsavas); and the other is a thoroughbred horse.

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings."

59.

"Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings. Which two?

"One is a Bhikkhu who has destroyed his heart's contaminants (āsavas); and the other is the lion, the king of all animals.

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, a loud and an earthshaking thunder bolt does not frighten these two beings."

60.

"Bhikkhus, by seeing the value of these two good reasons, you should completely avoid engaging in speech with random people. What are these two reasons?

"While reflecting:

'By not speaking, our words would never run the risk of being misunderstood or misconstrued, and secondly, our unspoken words would never get to be turned against us, in a way that we would become accused of something we never said or meant to say.'

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, by seeing the value of these two good reasons, you should completely avoid engaging in speech with random people."

61.

"Bhikkhus, women die unsatisfied and greedy for more in regards to these two things. Which two?

"Enjoying sexual intercourse; and giving birth.

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, women die unsatisfied and greedy for more in these two things."

62.

"Bhikkhus, I will speak to you on living while being surrounded by unsafe and evil people; and on living while being surrounded by safe and good people. Now, listen and attend carefully to what I shall say."

"Yes, Bhante!" The Bhikkhus replied.

The Blessed One then continued by saying:

"Bhikkhus, what is meant by 'living while being surrounded by unsafe and evil people?' Also, how do unsafe and evil people live and associate with each other?

"Here, an elder Bhikkhu keeps reflecting:

'No senior Bhikkhu, nor one of an average seniority and especially a junior Bhikkhu, could dare say anything critical about me or try to scold me on something!

'Similarly, I will not say anything critical to any Bhikkhu, whether they are senior, of an average seniority, or even junior Bhikkhus! It is better to keep out of each other's business, and that way we can keep the 'peace.'

'It's better this way, anyhow. I will not say anything to them that would make them upset or uncomfortable, so that they do not become cross or angry with me, and they also will not say anything to me that would make me upset or uncomfortable, wherein I might become cross or angry with them!

'This way, we would be out of each other's business, and still remain cordial and harmonious.

'Otherwise, if any senior Bhikkhu, or one of average seniority, or a junior Bhikkhu, were to indeed scold me, even if they meant well, then I know I would return the gesture and scold them back in turn, because they do not have the right to do so! And even if they were to be in the right, I find it absolutely unacceptable for someone to attack me or my character in any way, at all!'

"Similarly, a Bhikkhu with average seniority keeps reflecting:

'No senior Bhikkhu, or one of average seniority and especially a junior Bhikkhu, could dare say anything critical to me or try to scold me on something!

'Similarly, I will not say anything critical to any Bhikkhu, whether they are seniors, or of average seniority, or even junior Bhikkhus! It is better to keep out of each other's business, and that way we can keep the 'peace.'

'It is better this way, anyhow. I will not say anything to them that would make them upset or uncomfortable, so that they don't become cross or angry with me, and they also will not say anything to me that would make me upset or uncomfortable, whereby I might become cross or angry with them!

'This way, we would be out of each other's business, and still remain cordial and harmonious.

'Otherwise, if any senior Bhikkhu, or one of average seniority or a junior Bhikkhu, were to indeed scold me, even if they meant well, then I know I would return the gesture and scold them back in turn, because they do not have the right to do so! And even if they were to be in the right, I find it absolutely unacceptable for someone to attack me or my character in any way, at all!'

"Similarly, a junior Bhikkhu keeps reflecting:

'No senior Bhikkhu, or one of average seniority and especially a junior Bhikkhu, could dare say anything critical to me or try to scold me on something!

'Similarly, I will not say anything critical to any Bhikkhu, whether they are seniors, or of average seniority, or even junior Bhikkhus! It's better to keep out of each other's business, and that way we can keep the 'peace.'

'It's better this way, anyhow. I will not say anything to them that would make them upset or uncomfortable, so that they don't become cross or angry with me, and they too will not say anything to me that would make me upset or uncomfortable, whereby I might become cross or angry with them!

'This way, we would be out of each other's business, and still remain cordial and harmonious.

'Otherwise, if any senior Bhikkhu, or one of average seniority or a junior Bhikkhu, were to indeed scold me, even if they meant well, then I know I would return the favor and scold them back in turn, because they do not have the right to do so! And even if they were to be in the right, I find it absolutely unacceptable for someone to attack me or my character in any way, at all!'

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, this is what is meant by 'living while being surrounded by unsafe and evil people,' for this is how unsafe and evil people live and associate with each other.

"And what, Bhikkhus, was meant by 'living while being surrounded by safe and good people?' Also, how do safe and good people live and associate with each other?

"Here, Bhikkhus, an elder Bhikkhu keeps reflecting:

'Any Bhikkhu, whether senior, one of average seniority, or even a junior Bhikkhu, while having a valid reason to do so, should feel comfortable and at ease to approach me to say anything critical about me or to try and admonish me on something!

'Similarly, I too have the duty, when the need arises, to be critical of any Bhikkhu, whether they are seniors, of an average seniority, or junior Bhikkhus! It is better to be honest and face difficult situations in order to keep The Sangha pure and in check, unafraid of being honest, instead of pretending to be peaceful at the cost of losing the faith of the people!

'Therefore, we all must be candid, kind and considerate, but without sacrificing speaking and saying what needs to be said, instead of worrying whether what I say might offend or make them upset or uncomfortable. So, I welcome any well-intentioned constructive admonishment that comes from a good place in one's heart, which seeks my welfare, as well as those of others within the community! And I totally welcome and accept any such compassionate critique from my fellow Sangha brothers, towards modifying or amending any flaws seen in my conduct. That way, we can all work to maintain the health of the Sāsana, and the happiness of so many beings.'

"Similarly, a Bhikkhu with average seniority keeps reflecting:

'Any Bhikkhu, whether senior, one of average seniority, or even a junior Bhikkhu, while having a valid reason to do so, should feel comfortable and at ease to approach me to say anything critical about me or to try and admonish me on something!

'Similarly, I too have the duty, when the need arises, to be critical of any Bhikkhu, whether they are seniors, of an average seniority, or junior Bhikkhus! It is better to be honest and face difficult situations in order to keep The Sangha pure and in check, unafraid of being honest, instead of pretending to be peaceful at the cost of losing the faith of the people!

'Therefore, we all must be candid, kind and considerate, but without sacrificing speaking and saying what needs to be said, instead of worrying whether what I say might offend or make them upset or uncomfortable. So, I welcome any well-intentioned constructive admonishment that comes from a good place in one's heart, which seeks my welfare, as well as those of others within the community! And I totally welcome and accept any such compassionate critique from my fellow Sangha brothers, towards modifying or amending any flaws seen in my conduct. That way, we can all work to maintain the health of the Sāsana, and the happiness of so many beings.'

"Similarly, a junior Bhikkhu keeps reflecting:

'Any Bhikkhu, whether senior, one of average seniority, or even a junior Bhikkhu, while having a valid reason to do so, should feel comfortable and at ease to approach me to say anything critical about me or to try and admonish me on something!

'Similarly, I too have the duty, when the need arises, to be critical of any Bhikkhu, whether they are seniors, of an average seniority, or junior Bhikkhus! It is better to be honest and face difficult situations in order to keep The Sangha pure and in check, unafraid of being honest, instead of pretending to be peaceful at the cost of losing the faith of the people!

'Therefore, we all must be candid, kind and considerate, but without sacrificing speaking and saying what needs to be said, instead of worrying whether what I say might offend or make them upset or uncomfortable. So, I welcome any well-intentioned constructive admonishment that comes from a good place in one's heart, which seeks my welfare, as well as those of others within the community! And I totally welcome and accept any such compassionate critique from my fellow Sangha brothers, towards modifying or amending any flaws seen in my conduct. That way, we can all work to maintain the health of the Sāsana, and the happiness of so many beings.'

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, this is what is meant by 'living while being surrounded by safe and good people,' for this is how safe and good people live and associate with each other."

63.

"Bhikkhus, while addressing disciplinary issues, if both parties of Bhikkhus who, although might be seeking a settlement for the matter, yet go on backbiting, slandering, and carrying around tales, back and forth, thereby continuing to point the finger as to who is right and who is wrong, then words become convoluted and contorted beyond recognition, while emotions get hurt, creating an atmosphere where contempt and hatred towards each other keep proliferating, without end in sight.

"And, if this is allowed to drag on without being addressed directly by The Sangha to settle it internally and in a speedy manner, then chaos and disharmony will prevail within The Sangha, and not harmony; fractures will take place, and the Bhikkhus will lose their peace of mind and the security of living within The Sangha.

"On the other hand, Bhikkhus, while addressing disciplinary issues, if both parties of Bhikkhus, while trying to seek a settlement of the matter, do not go on backbiting, slandering and thus stop carrying around tales, back and forth, no longer pointing the finger as to who is right and who is wrong, where words do not get convoluted or contorted beyond recognition, then emotions do not get hurt, and contempt or hatred towards each other stop proliferating.

"Therefore, in having such a stance, the disharmonious situation is not allowed to drag on any further, and is thus addressed directly and handled appropriately by The Sangha internally, and in a speedy manner. As a result, peace and concord will prevail within The Sangha, for there will be unity again; harmony and friendship will take place, and the Bhikkhus will abide with ease in their hearts, within the comfort and security of living in The Sangha."

AN II

Suttas 64-76

Sukha Vagga

"The Section on Happiness"

64.

"Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

"The happiness one experiences as a householder, and the happiness that is experienced by one who has gone forth.

"And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is experienced by one who has gone forth is indeed the greatest."

65.

"Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

"The happiness one experiences from sensual pursuits, and the happiness that is experienced by renouncing and giving up sensuality altogether.

"And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is experienced by renouncing and giving up sensuality altogether is indeed the greatest."

66.

"Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

"The happiness that comes from the assets one has acquired, and the happiness that is experienced by freeing oneself from all assets and acquisitions altogether.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is experienced by freeing oneself from all assets and acquisitions altogether, is indeed the greatest.”

67.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that is contaminated, and the happiness that is uncontaminated and thus free from all the āsavas.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is uncontaminated and thus free from all the āsavas, is indeed the greatest.”

68.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“Material or worldly happiness connected with the body, and spiritual happiness which has nothing to do with the world nor the body.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the spiritual happiness which has nothing to do with the world nor the body, is indeed the greatest.”

69.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“Noble happiness and dishonorable happiness.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, noble happiness is indeed the greatest.”

70.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that comes from the physical body, and the happiness that comes from the heart.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that comes from the heart is indeed the greatest.”

71.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that is connected to spiritual joy, and the happiness that is freed from spiritual joy.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is freed from spiritual joy is indeed the greatest.”

72.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that comes from experiencing agreeable circumstances, and the happiness that is the result of having equanimity.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is the result of having equanimity is indeed the greatest.”

73.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that is the result of samādhi, and the happiness that no longer requires samādhi.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that no longer requires samādhi is indeed the greatest.”

74.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that results from using spiritual joy as one’s object of meditation, and the happiness that does not rely on using spiritual joy as one’s object of meditation.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that no longer relies on using spiritual joy as one’s object of meditation is indeed the greatest.”

75.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that is based on pleasure, and the happiness that is based on equanimity.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that is based on equanimity is indeed the greatest.”

76.

“Bhikkhus, happiness is of two types. What two?

“The happiness that results from experiencing tangible objects of form, and the happiness that results from experiencing the nontangible and the formless.

“And among these two, Bhikkhus, the happiness that results from experiencing the nontangible and the formless is indeed the greatest.”

AN II

Suttas 77-86

Sanimitta Vagga

"Established Upon a Sign"

77.

"Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves are established upon a sign and are not without one, for they are anchored upon something which they use as their bedrock.

"Therefore, when that object is destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more."

78.

"Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves have a source and point of origin and are not without one, for they need it in order to persist.

"Therefore, when that source and point of origin is destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more."

79.

"Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves have a cause, and are not without one, for they need it in order to persist.

"Therefore, when that cause itself is destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more."

80.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves have a series of generative causes that impel and bring them about, without which they cannot be or even arise.

“Therefore, when those generative causes are destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

81.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves have their conditioning reasons, and thus cannot be or even arise without those conditions.

“Therefore, when those conditioning reasons are destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

82.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves pertain to form, and cannot be or even arise without some connection to form.

“Therefore, when those forms are removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

83.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves rely on feelings, and cannot be or even arise without some connection to feelings.

“Therefore, when those feelings are removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

84.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves rely on perceptions, and cannot be or even arise without the presence of perceptions.

“Therefore, when those perceptions are removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

85.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves rely on consciousness, and cannot be or even arise without the presence of consciousness.

“Therefore, when those consciousnesses are removed by no longer relying on them, then those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

86.

“Bhikkhus, evil and damaging qualities arise in the first place, because they themselves rely on being ‘prepared’ through their ‘winding up’, and cannot be or even arise without some act of preparing, winding or ‘loading up’, whether willfully or not.

“Therefore, when that mechanism of preparing or loading up is destroyed and removed, those evil and damaging qualities will naturally fade away and occur no more.”

AN II

Suttas 87-97

Dhamma Vagga

"The Section on Two Things"

87.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

"Release of the Heart, and Release through Wisdom.

"These are the two things, Bhikkhus."

88.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

"Constantly lifting yourself up, and being focused on your goal by maintaining your course.

"These are the two things, Bhikkhus."

89.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

"Name and Form.

"These are the two things, Bhikkhus."

90.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Direct Unmistakable Knowledge, and Freedom itself.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

91.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Looking forward to rebecoming, and looking forward to no longer becoming anything.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

92.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Lacking inner wise moral shame (hirī), and lacking wise moral fear (ottappa).

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

93.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and possessing wise moral fear.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

94.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Being difficult to discipline and remaining pig-headed; and associating with evil companions, who maintain their negative influence on you, by sabotaging your growth.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

95.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Being obedient and easy to discipline; and associating with good companions, who positively influence and support your growth.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

96.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Being versatile in successfully navigating whatever situations you face on The Path; and being versatile with the mind, by successfully navigating through its many fluctuations, undeterred.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

97.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. Which two?

“Possessing the unmistakable understanding as to what really constitutes an offense; and possessing the understanding to come up with resolutions for the offenses committed.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

AN II

Suttas 98-117

Bāla Vagga

"The Second Section on Fools"

98.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of fools. What two?

"The one who takes ownership (and responsibility) for something he has not done yet, and the one who does not take ownership (and the responsibility) for what he has already done.

"These are the two kinds of fools, Bhikkhus."

99.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of considerate and wise people. What two?

"The one who does not take ownership (or responsibility) for something he has not done yet, and the one who does take ownership (and the responsibility) for what he has already done.

"These are the two kinds of considerate and wise people, Bhikkhus."

100.

"Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of fools. What two?

"The one who considers that which is not allowed as something allowed, and the one who considers what is allowed as something not allowed.

"These are the two kinds of fools, Bhikkhus."

101.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of considerate and wise people. What two?

“The one who considers that which is not allowed as something not allowed, and the one who considers what is allowed as something that is allowed.

“These are the two kinds of considerate and wise people, Bhikkhus.”

102.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of fools. What two?

“The one who considers what is not an offense to be an offense, while the other considers what in fact is an offense not to be an offense.

“These are the two kinds of fools, Bhikkhus.”

103.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of considerate and wise people. What two?

“The one who considers what is not an offense as not being an offense, while the other considers what in fact is an offense, to be an offense.

“These are the two kinds of considerate and wise people, Bhikkhus.”

104.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of fools. What two?

“The one who considers what is adhamma to be The True Dhamma, while the other looks at what in fact is The True Dhamma, but sees it as adhamma.

“These are the two kinds of fools, Bhikkhus.”

105.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of considerate and wise people. What two?

“The one who considers what is adhamma as indeed not The Dhamma, and the other considers what in fact is The True Dhamma, to be none other than The True Dhamma, indeed.

“These are the two kinds of considerate and wise people, Bhikkhus.”

106.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of fools. What two?

“The one who considers what is not the Discipline to be the Discipline (Vinaya), and the other who considers what really is the Discipline, but sees it as not being the Discipline.

“These are the two kinds of fools, Bhikkhus.”

107.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of considerate and wise people. What two?

“The one who considers what is not the Discipline as not being the Discipline (Vinaya), and the other considers what really is the Discipline, as none other than the Discipline.

“These are the two kinds of considerate and wise people, Bhikkhus.”

108.

“Bhikkhus, the heart’s contaminants (āsavas) continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

“The one who becomes deeply concerned and feels remorse over things for which there is no need, and the other who does not become deeply concerned nor feels remorse over things, for which he truly needs to become deeply concerned and worried.

“These are the two individuals for whom the heart’s contaminants (āsavas) continue to increase, Bhikkhus.”

109.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants (āsavas) do not continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who does not become deeply concerned nor feels remorse over things for which there is no need, and the other who becomes deeply concerned and feels remorse over things for which there is a need.

"These are the two individuals for whom the heart's contaminants (āsavas) do not continue to increase, Bhikkhus."

110.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who considers that which is not allowed as something allowed, and the one who considers what in fact is allowed, as something not allowed.

"These are the two individuals for whom the heart's contaminants continue to increase, Bhikkhus."

111.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants do not continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who considers that which is not allowed as something not allowed, and the one who considers what is allowed as something that is allowed.

"These are the two individuals for whom the heart's contaminants do not continue to increase, Bhikkhus."

112.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who considers what is not an offense to be an offense, while the other considers what in fact is an offense to not be an offense.

“These are the two individuals for whom the heart’s contaminants continue to increase, Bhikkhus.”

113.

“Bhikkhus, the heart’s contaminants do not continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

“The one who considers what is not an offense as not being an offense, while the other considers what is an offense to indeed be an offense.

“These are the two individuals for whom the heart’s contaminants do not continue to increase, Bhikkhus.”

114.

“Bhikkhus, the heart’s contaminants continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

“The one who considers what is adhamma to be The True Dhamma, and the other considers what in fact is The True Dhamma yet sees it as adhamma.

“These are the two individuals for whom the heart’s contaminants continue to increase, Bhikkhus.”

115.

“Bhikkhus, the heart’s contaminants do not continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

“The one who considers what is adhamma as indeed not being The Dhamma, and the other considers what in fact is The True Dhamma to be none other than The True Dhamma, indeed.

“These are the two individuals for whom the heart’s contaminants do not continue to increase, Bhikkhus.”

116.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who considers what is not the Discipline to be the Discipline, and the other who considers what really is the Discipline as not being the Discipline.

"These are the two individuals for whom the heart's contaminants continue to increase, Bhikkhus."

117.

"Bhikkhus, the heart's contaminants do not continue to increase for these two individuals. What two?

"The one who considers what is not the Discipline as not being the Discipline (or Vinaya), and the other who considers what really is the Discipline, as none other than the Discipline.

"These are the two individuals for whom the heart's contaminants do not continue to increase, Bhikkhus."

AN II

Suttas 118-129

Āsāduppajaha Vagga

"Wishes that are Difficult to Abandon"

118.

"Bhikkhus, it is difficult to abandon these two wishes from the heart. Which two?

"The wish for more wealth, and the wish to live a long life.

"These are the two wishes that are difficult to abandon, Bhikkhus."

119.

"Bhikkhus, these two types of people are truly rare in existence. What two?

"The first is the person who takes the initiative and helps those in need without missing the opportunity, and the second is the grateful person, who reciprocates without a moment's hesitation, while being full of appreciation.

"These are the two types of people who are truly rare in existence, Bhikkhus."

120.

"Bhikkhus, these two types of people are truly rare in existence. What two?

"The person who becomes contented and satisfied, and the one who seeks to satisfy the needs of others.

"These are the two types of people who are truly rare in existence, Bhikkhus."

121.

“Bhikkhus, these two types of people are difficult to satisfy. What two?

“The one who is addicted to accumulating wealth, and the one who is addicted to recklessly wasting away whatever he gains.

“These are the two types of people who are difficult to satisfy, Bhikkhus.”

122.

“Bhikkhus, these two types of people are quite easy to satisfy. What two?

“The one who is not addicted to accumulating wealth, and the one who does not recklessly waste away whatever he gains.

“These are the two types of people who are quite easy to satisfy, Bhikkhus.”

123.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two prerequisites for the arising of passions and lust. Which two?

“The first is that which is experienced as something attractive, and the second is having unwise and careless attention.

“These are the two prerequisites for the arising of passions and lust, Bhikkhus.”

124.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two prerequisites for the arising of hatred and anger. Which two?

“The first is that which is experienced as something displeasing, with resistance towards it, while the other is having unwise and careless attention.

“These are the two prerequisites for the arising of hatred and anger, Bhikkhus.”

125.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two prerequisites for the arising of wrong views. Which two?

“Whatever is witnessed or heard being spoken by another, and having unwise and careless attention.

“These are the two prerequisites for the arising of wrong views, Bhikkhus.”

126.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two prerequisites for the arising of Right View. Which two?

“Whatever is witnessed or heard being spoken by another, and having wise and radical attention.

“These are the two prerequisites for the arising of Right View, Bhikkhus.”

127.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of offenses. Which two?

“The light or minor offense, and the heavy or grave offense.

“These are the two kinds of offenses, Bhikkhus.”

128.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of offenses. Which two?

“The offense without any evil intention behind it, and the offense that has evil intentions behind it.

“These are the two kinds of offenses, Bhikkhus.”

129.

“Bhikkhus, these are the two kinds of offenses. Which two?

“The offense that can be remedied, and the offense that cannot be remedied.

“These are the two kinds of offenses, Bhikkhus.”

AN II

Suttas 130-140

Āyācana Vagga

"The Section on Aspiring"

130.

"Bhikkhus, any Bhikkhu of mine who possesses strong faith and confidence in his heart, longing for perfection, should rightfully aspire to the following:

'May I become like Sāriputta and Moggallāna!'

"After all, Bhikkhus, this is the standard to which all my Bhikkhu Sangha must compare and measure themselves with all the time, that is, Sāriputta and Moggallāna."

131.

"Bhikkhus, any Bhikkhuni of mine who possesses strong faith and confidence in her heart, longing for perfection, should rightfully aspire to the following:

'May I become like the Bhikkhunis Khemā and Uppalavāṇṇā!'

"After all, Bhikkhus, this is the standard to which all my Bhikkhuni Sangha must compare and measure themselves with all the time, that is, Khemā and Uppalavāṇṇā."

132.

"Bhikkhus, any Upāsaka (male lay disciple) of mine who possesses strong faith and confidence in his heart, longing for perfection, should rightfully aspire to the following:

'May I become like the householders Citta and Hatthaka of Āḷavī!'

"After all, Bhikkhus, this is the standard to which all my Upāsaka disciples must compare and measure themselves with all the time, that is, the householders Citta and Hatthaka of Āḷavī."

133.

“Bhikkhus, any Upāsikā (female lay disciple) of mine who possesses strong faith and confidence in her heart, longing for perfection, should rightfully aspire to the following:

‘May I become like Khujjuttarā and Veḷukaṇṭakī Nandamātā!’

“After all, Bhikkhus, this is the standard to which all my Upāsika disciples must compare and measure themselves with all the time, that is, Khujjuttarā and Veḷukaṇṭakī Nandamātā.”

134.

“Bhikkhus, it is by possessing two vile qualities that the unlearned foolish man, who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“Now, what are those two qualities he possesses?

“Without doing any investigation or trying to find out and understand, he praises that which should not be praised, while also criticizing and disparaging that which should be praised.

“By possessing these two vile qualities, Bhikkhus, the unlearned foolish man, who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, it is by possessing these two other qualities that the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.

“And what are those two qualities he possesses?

“Before speaking, first he investigates and carefully scrutinizes, in order to reach a conclusive understanding, and only then he praises that which should be praised, while criticizing and disparaging that which should indeed be criticized.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two other qualities, the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.”

135.

“Bhikkhus, it is by possessing two vile qualities that the unlearned foolish man, who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“Now, what are those two qualities he possesses?

“Without trying to first investigate or scrutinize, he believes things that warrant healthy skepticism, as he blindly places his trust in questionable things. Meanwhile, he becomes dubious and highly suspicious of things that in fact do not warrant any skepticism, meriting trust and confidence.

“By possessing these two vile qualities, Bhikkhus, the unlearned foolish man who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, it is by possessing these two other qualities that the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.

“And what are those two qualities he possesses?

“Before putting his trust in something, first he investigates and carefully scrutinizes, and thus does not place his trust by blindly believing in questionable things that warrant suspicion. Furthermore, he places his trust in things only after having carefully investigated them and seen their truth, thereby putting his confidence in things that merit faith and trust.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, it is by possessing these two other qualities that the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.”

136.

“Bhikkhus, by mistreating and wrongly behaving towards two individuals, the unlearned foolish man who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“Now, who are those two individuals?

“They are his mother and father.

“Thus, by mistreating and wrongly behaving towards these two individuals, the unlearned foolish man who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, by treating well and correctly behaving towards two individuals, the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.

“Now, who are those two individuals?

“They are his mother and father.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by treating well and correctly behaving towards two individuals, the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.”

137.

“Bhikkhus, by mistreating and wrongly behaving towards two individuals, the unlearned foolish man who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“Now, who are those two individuals?

“The Tathāgata and a Noble Disciple of The Tathāgata.

“Thus, by mistreating and wrongly behaving towards these two individuals, the unlearned foolish man who is inferior by any and all measures, keeps himself in ruin by constantly working to decapitate and destroy himself, whereby he is unanimously found guilty and blamable in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much demerit and very bad Kammic fruits.

“On the other hand, Bhikkhus, by treating well and correctly behaving towards two individuals, the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.

“Now, who are those two individuals?

“The Tathāgata and a Noble Disciple of The Tathāgata.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by treating well and correctly behaving towards these two individuals, the learned wise man who is competent and superior, shields and safeguards himself from ever being injured or harmed, whereby he is unquestionably found praiseworthy and blameless in his actions by all those who are truly wise, and as a result, he amasses much merits and very good Kammic fruits.”

138.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. What two?

“Purifying and cleansing one’s own heart, and holding on to nothing in existence.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

139.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. What two?

“Being angry, and holding on to hostility.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.”

140.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two things. What two?

“Removing anger from the heart, and giving up hostility.

“These are the two things, Bhikkhus.

AN II

Suttas 141-150

Dāna Vagga

"The Section on Generosity"

141.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of being generous. What are these two?

"Being generous with the offering of material gifts, and being generous with offering the gift of The Dhamma.

"Between these two ways of being generous, being generous by offering the gift of The Dhamma is truly supreme!"

142.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of making an offering. What are these two?

"Making an offering of material gifts, and making an offering of The Dhamma.

"Between these two ways of making an offering, making an offering of The Dhamma is truly supreme!"

143.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of giving away what one has. What are these two?

"The giving away of material possessions, and the giving away of The Dhamma one possesses in the heart.

"Between these two ways of giving away what one possesses, the giving away of The Dhamma one possesses in the heart is truly supreme!"

144.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of giving up what was held on to. What are these two?

“The giving up of material possessions that was held on to, and the giving up of The Dhamma one was holding on to.

“Between these two ways of giving up what was held on to, giving up The Dhamma that one held on to is truly supreme!”

145.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two kinds of treasures one may come to have. What two?

“The treasure of wealth and material things, and the treasure of The Dhamma.

“Between these two kinds of treasures one may come to have, the treasure of The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

146.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of enjoyment. Which two?

“The enjoyment of wealth and material things, and the enjoyment of The Dhamma.

“Between these two enjoyments, the enjoyment of The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

147.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of sharing. Which two?

“The sharing of wealth and material things, and the sharing of The Dhamma.

“Between these two types of sharing, the sharing of The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

148.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of upholding a healthy relationship. Which two?

“Upholding a healthy relationship for the sake of social and material benefits, and the upholding of healthy relationships for the sake of The Dhamma.

“Between these two ways of upholding a healthy relationship, the upholding of healthy relationships for the sake of The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

149.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of providing support and assistance. Which two?

“Providing support and assistance with wealth and material things, and providing support and assistance with The Dhamma.

“Between these two types of providing support and assistance, providing support and assistance with The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

150.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of being compassionate. What two?

“Being compassionate through the giving of wealth and material things, and being compassionate with The Dhamma.

“Between these two ways of being compassionate, being compassionate with The Dhamma is truly supreme!”

AN II

Suttas 151-162

Santhāra Vagga

"The Section on the Long-Awaited"

151.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of 'spreading the welcome mat' for the long-awaited. What two?

"Spreading the welcome mat for material or worldly things, and the spreading of the welcome mat for the long-awaited Dhamma that has finally arrived.

"Between these two, the spreading of the welcome mat for the long-awaited Dhamma that has finally arrived, is indeed the supreme."

152.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of being hospitable. Which two?

"Being hospitable with the worldly or material resources one has, and being hospitable with The Dhamma in one's heart.

"Between these two, being hospitable with The Dhamma in one's heart is indeed the supreme."

153.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two quests. Which two?

"The quest for comforts that worldly or material resources may provide, and the quest for the relief that only The Dhamma provides.

"Between these two, the quest for the relief that only The Dhamma provides is truly the greatest."

154.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two pursuits. Which two?

“The pursuit of worldly or material things, and the pursuit of The Dhamma.

“Between these two, the pursuit of The Dhamma is truly supreme.”

155.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two searches. Which two?

“One is the search for material things and all that is conditioned, while the other is the search for The Dhamma.

“Between these two, the search for The Dhamma is truly supreme.”

156.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of venerating and paying respect. What two?

“Venerating and paying respect to things that are worldly or material, and venerating and paying respect to The Dhamma.

“Between these two, the veneration and paying of respect to The Dhamma is truly supreme.”

157.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of gifts one may give to a visiting guest. Which two?

“The gift of worldly or material things, and the gift of The Dhamma.

“Between these two, giving the gift of The Dhamma to a visiting guest is truly supreme.”

158.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of achieving success. What two?

“The success one achieves in worldly or material things, and the success one achieves in The Dhamma.

“Between these two, the success one achieves in The Dhamma is truly supreme.”

159.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two types of growth. What two?

“The growth experienced in worldly or material things, and the growth in The Dhamma.

“Between these two, the growth experienced in The Dhamma is truly supreme.”

160.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two jewels. What two?

“The material or worldly jewel that one may possess, and the jewel of The Dhamma one comes to possess in the heart.

“Between these two, the jewel of The Dhamma one comes to possess in the heart is truly supreme.”

161.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two accumulations. Which two?

“The accumulation of material or worldly things, and the accumulation of The Dhamma in one’s heart.

“Between these two, the accumulation of The Dhamma in one’s heart is truly supreme.”

162.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two ways of ‘becoming fully accomplished.’ What two?

“Becoming accomplished in material or worldly things, and becoming fully accomplished in The Dhamma.

“Between these two, becoming fully accomplished in The Dhamma is truly the most supreme.”

AN II

Suttas 163-179

Samāpatti Vagga

"The Section on the Meditative Attainments"

163.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

"Knowing how to successfully enter into meditative attainments, and knowing how to successfully emerge out of those meditative attainments.

"These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus."

164.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

"Possessing integrity, and being genuinely kindhearted.

"These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus."

165.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

"Possessing patience, and having a warm heart.

"These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus."

166.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Speaking aptly sweet words, and having welcoming friendliness.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

167.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Being harmless, and having purity of heart.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

168.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Not protecting oneself due to lack of restraint of the six sense doors, and not being moderate in consuming food.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

169.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Protecting oneself through restraint of the six sense doors, and being moderate in consuming food.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

170.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“The power of careful consideration, and the power of cultivation.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

171.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“The power of sati (mindfulness), and the power of samādhi (collected stability of the heart).

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

172.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

173.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Failing to live with virtue, and failing to develop Right View.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

174.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Becoming firmly established in virtuous living, and being confidently established in Right View.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

175.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Purity of living with virtue, and purity of Right View in one’s heart.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

176.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Purification of one’s understanding of Right View, while striving diligently to live according to the purity of Right View in one’s heart.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

177.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Not becoming contented and thus satisfied with the beneficial qualities that are present in oneself, and untiringly striving to develop further in This Holy Life.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

178.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Having a clouded mind, and lacking full awareness of whatever is taking place.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

179.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two complimentary qualities. What two?

“Possessing ongoing mindfulness (sati), and possessing full awareness (sampajañña) of whatever is taking place.

“These are the two complimentary qualities, Bhikkhus.”

AN II

Suttas 180-229

Kodhapeyyālam

"Abbreviated Sections, Starting with Anger"

180.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

"Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

"These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus."

181.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

"Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one's heart.

"These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus."

182.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

"Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

"These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus."

183.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Being deceitful, and sneakiness.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

184.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor having wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

185.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

186.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

187.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

188.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

189.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two qualities. Which two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame (hirī), and wise moral fear (ottappa) in one’s heart.

“These are the two qualities, Bhikkhus.”

190.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist, but while festering in suffering. What are these two?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“These are the two qualities that keep one lingering in suffering, Bhikkhus.”

191.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist in suffering. What are these two?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“These are the two qualities that keep one lingering in suffering, Bhikkhus.”

192.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist in suffering. What are these two?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“These are the two qualities that keep one lingering in suffering, Bhikkhus.”

193.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist in suffering. What are these two?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“These are the two qualities that keep one lingering in suffering, Bhikkhus.”

194.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist in suffering. What are these two?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor having wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These are the two qualities that keep one lingering in suffering, Bhikkhus.”

195.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist happily. What are these two?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“These are the two qualities that keep one living in happiness, Bhikkhus.”

196.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist happily. What are these two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“These are the two qualities that keep one living in happiness, Bhikkhus.”

197.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist happily. What are these two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“These are the two qualities that keep one living in happiness, Bhikkhus.”

198.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist happily. What are these two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“These are the two qualities that keep one living in happiness, Bhikkhus.”

199.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities one continues to exist happily. What are these two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These are the two qualities that keep one living in happiness, Bhikkhus.”

200.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life.”

201.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life.”

202.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life.”

203.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life.”

204.

“Bhikkhus, while lacking these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Living shamelessly without any sense of wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, while lacking these two qualities the Bhikkhu fails in living The Holy Life.”

205.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, the Bhikkhu will neither fail nor regress in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu will neither fail, nor regress in living The Holy Life.”

206.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, the Bhikkhu will neither fail nor regress in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu will neither fail, nor regress in living The Holy Life.”

207.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, the Bhikkhu will neither fail nor regress in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu will neither fail, nor regress in living The Holy Life.”

208.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, the Bhikkhu will neither fail nor regress in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, in the presence of these two qualities the Bhikkhu will neither fail, nor regress in living The Holy Life.”

209.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, the Bhikkhu will neither fail nor regress in living The Holy Life. What are these two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities the Bhikkhu will neither fail, nor regress in living The Holy Life.”

210.

“Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell. What are these two qualities?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell.”

211.

“Bhikkhus, due to possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell. What are these two qualities?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, due to possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell.”

212.

“Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell. What are these two qualities?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell.”

213.

“Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell. What are these two qualities?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell.”

214.

“Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell. What are these two qualities?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, because of possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into hell.”

215.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas.”

216.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into the happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas.”

217.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas. What are these two qualities?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas.”

218.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas. What are these two qualities?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas.”

219.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas. What are these two qualities?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing in the Divine realms of the Devas.”

220.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture. What are these two qualities?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture.”

221.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture. What are these two qualities?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture.”

222.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture. What are these two qualities?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture.”

223.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture. What are these two qualities?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture.”

224.

“Bhikkhus, by not possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture. What are these two qualities?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by not possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately dragged and dropped into horrible destinations, reappearing in the hells, to suffer unimaginable torture.”

225.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments.”

226.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments.”

227.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments. What are these two qualities?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments.”

228.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments. What are these two qualities?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments.”

229.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments. What are these two qualities?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, after death, one is immediately reborn into happy states, reappearing within heavenly destinations, in the Divine realms of the Devas, to experience unimaginable enjoyments.”

AN II

Suttas 230-279

Akusalapeyyālam

"Abbreviated Section on the Harmful and Damaging"

230.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin. Which two?

"Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

"These are the two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin, Bhikkhus."

231.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin. Which two?

"Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one's heart.

"These are the two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin, Bhikkhus."

232.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin. Which two?

"Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

"These are the two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin, Bhikkhus."

233.

"Bhikkhus, there are these two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin. Which two?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“These are the two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin, Bhikkhus.”

234.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin. Which two?

“Not having any sense of wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These are the two harmful and damaging qualities that lead to ruin, Bhikkhus.”

235.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two beneficial qualities that lead to growth. Which two?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“These are the two beneficial qualities that lead to growth, Bhikkhus.”

236.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two beneficial qualities that lead to growth. Which two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“These are the two beneficial qualities that lead to growth, Bhikkhus.”

237.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two beneficial qualities that lead to growth. Which two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“These are the two beneficial qualities that lead to growth, Bhikkhus.”

238.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two beneficial and good merit-making qualities that lead to growth. Which two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“These are the two beneficial and good merit-making qualities that lead to growth, Bhikkhus.”

239.

“Bhikkhus, there are these two beneficial and good merit-making qualities that lead to growth. Which two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These are the two beneficial and good merit-making qualities that lead to growth, Bhikkhus.”

240.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities make you blameworthy. What are these two?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“These two qualities make you blameworthy, Bhikkhus.”

241.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities make you blameworthy. What are these two?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“These two qualities make you blameworthy, Bhikkhus.”

242.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities make you blameworthy. What are these two?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“These two qualities make you blameworthy, Bhikkhus.”

243.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities make you blameworthy. What are these two?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“These two qualities make you blameworthy, Bhikkhus.”

244.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities make you blameworthy. What are these two?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These two qualities make you blameworthy, Bhikkhus.”

245.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities keep you blameless. What are these two?

“Being released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“These two qualities keep you blameless, Bhikkhus.”

246.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities keep you blameless. What are these two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“These two qualities keep you blameless, Bhikkhus.”

247.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities keep you blameless. What are these two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“These two qualities keep you blameless, Bhikkhus.”

248.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities keep you blameless. What are these two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“These two qualities keep you blameless, Bhikkhus.”

249.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities keep you blameless. What are these two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“These two qualities keep you blameless, Bhikkhus.”

250.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome. What are these two?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome.”

251.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome. What are these two?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome.”

252.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome. What are these two?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome.”

253.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome. What are these two?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome.”

254.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome. What are these two?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce suffering as their outcome.”

255.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome. What are these two?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome.”

256.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome. What are these two?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome.”

257.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome. What are these two?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome.”

258.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome. What are these two?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome.”

259.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome. What are these two?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities only produce happiness as their outcome.”

260.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result.”

261.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result.”

262.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result.”

263.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result.”

264.

“Bhikkhus, by not possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by not possessing these two qualities, one experiences suffering as a result.”

265.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result.”

266.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result.”

267.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result.”

268.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result. What are these two qualities?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result.”

269.

“Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result. What are these two qualities?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, by possessing these two qualities, one experiences happiness as a result.”

270.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment. What are these two qualities?

“Anger, and a heart that is clouded with bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment.”

271.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment. What are these two qualities?

“Belittling while vilifying others, and living with contempt in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment.”

272.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment. What are these two qualities?

“Living with jealousy, and being stingy.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment.”

273.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment. What are these two qualities?

“Being deceitful, and sneaky.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment.”

274.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment. What are these two qualities?

“Neither having wise inner moral shame, nor any wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities cause so much pain and torment.”

275.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming released from anger, and liberating the heart from its once bitter resentment.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief.”

276.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief. What are these two qualities?

“Becoming liberated from the push to belittle or vilify others, and living with a heart that is freed from contempt.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief.”

277.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief. What are these two qualities?

“Getting released from living with jealousy, and finally being liberated from stinginess.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief.”

278.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief. What are these two qualities?

“No longer being deceitful, and freedom from sneakiness.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief.”

279.

“Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief. What are these two qualities?

“Possessing wise inner moral shame, and wise moral fear in one’s heart.

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, these two qualities bring so much relief.”

AN II

Suttas 280-309

Vinayapeyyālam

"Abbreviated Sections on The Monastic Code of Discipline"

280.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, once and for all, and in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, while still here in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate or poison one's heart in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time disbanding vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not possess them yet, while at the same time bolstering and strengthening the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect these monastic rules of The Vinaya, to support His disciples in their training."

281.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart, down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training."

282.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart, down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the recitation of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training."

283.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart, down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the suspension of the Pātimokkha, to support His disciples in their training."

284.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart, down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training."

285.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?
a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through their evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect suspending the invitation protocol, to support His disciples in their training."

286.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reprimanding, to support His disciples in their training."

287.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of placing the wrong-doer back into 'dependence' status, to support His disciples in their training."

288.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?
a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of expulsion, to support His disciples in their training."

289.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of reconciliation, to support His disciples in their training."

290.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act of suspension, to support His disciples in their training."

291.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disentitlement of the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training."

292.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect sending the wrongdoer 'back to the beginning,' to support His disciples in their training."

293.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the imposition of reparation, to support His disciples in their training."

294.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect rehabilitation, to support His disciples in their training."

295.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect reinstatement, to support His disciples in their training."

296.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect removal, to support His disciples in their training."

297.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect Full Ordination, to support His disciples in their training."

298.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, to support His disciples in their training."

299.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with an added announcement, to support His disciples in their training."

300.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the disciplinary act involving a legal motion, with three added announcements, to support His disciples in their training."

301.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect a training rule where none had been in place earlier, to support His disciples in their training."

302.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has added an amendment to an existing training rule, to support His disciples in their training."

303.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal through presence, to support His disciples in their training."

304.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of accurate recollection, to support His disciples in their training."

305.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the removal of a disciplinary issue on account of insanity, to support His disciples in their training."

306.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the acknowledgement of the offense by the wrongdoer, to support His disciples in their training."

307.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the decision of the majority, to support His disciples in their training."

308.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the declaration of aggravated misconduct, to support His disciples in their training."

309.

"Bhikkhus, having identified the validity of these two important reasons, The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training. And what are these two reasons?

a. "It is for the distinctive superior quality of The Sangha, and the harmonious wellbeing of The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

b. "In addition, it is for keeping those persistently noncompliant Bhikkhus in check, as well as to protect the peace of mind of those good Bhikkhus within The Sangha.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

c. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the contaminants of the heart, here, while in this body, as well as to eliminate, in this very life, the contaminants that would have to be dealt with in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

d. "In addition, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any possibility for dangers or threats to occur in this life, which might be triggered by wrong actions, and to protect oneself and others from the damage that such dangers and threats would otherwise present in the future as well.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

e. "Furthermore, it is to eliminate (through restraint) the occurrence of mistakes, here, while in this body, as well as to protect oneself, in this very life, from committing such mistakes in future lives, once and for all.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

f. "Also, it is to eliminate (through restraint) any chances for menacing circumstances that would occur due to ignorance or neglect, here in the present, as well as to safeguard oneself and others from facing any menacing circumstances in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

g. "In addition, it is to eradicate (through restraint) the damaging and harmful qualities that have accumulated in one's heart down to the present life, while also ensuring that damaging or harmful qualities do not persist or continue to accumulate and poison one's heart, in future lives.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

h. "Also, it is out of universal compassion for laypeople everywhere, in order to protect them, while at the same time to disband vain and self-serving Bhikkhus, who seek to create their own factions through evil schemes.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

i. "In addition, it is to instill faith and confidence within the hearts of the many who do not have them yet, while at the same time, to bolster and strengthen the faith and confidence of those whose hearts already palpitate with deep respect, love, and appreciation for The Triple Gem.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training.

j. "And, it is to put the security measures in place for the continued protection and preservation of This True and Beautiful Dhamma, as well as to provide support and proper foundational backing for the practice of This Noble Training.

"Thus, Bhikkhus, these are two good reasons, for which The Tathāgata has put into effect the 'covering-up of the issue with grass', to support His disciples in their training."

AN II

Suttas 310-479

Rāgapeyyālam

"Abbreviated Sections, Starting with Passion"

310.

"Bhikkhus, to directly penetrate into reality, you must recognize and know passion for what it truly is, through the development of these two qualities of the heart.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, Bhikkhus, in order for you to directly penetrate into reality, you must recognize and know passion for what it truly is, through the development of these two qualities of the heart."

311-319.

"Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know passion for what it truly is.

"Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy passion, for the complete giving up of passion, for the ending of passion, for the wiping out of passion, for the fading away and for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to passion, for the cessation of passion, for the abandoning of passion, and for the relinquishing of all passion, and for good, these two qualities of the heart should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“Therefore, Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know passion for what it truly is.

“Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy passion, for the complete giving up of passion, for the ending of passion, for the wiping out of passion, for the fading away and for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to passion, for the cessation of passion, for the abandoning of passion, and for the relinquishing of all passion, and for good, these two qualities of the heart should be fully developed and cultivated.”

320-479.

a. “Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know hatred for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy hatred, for the complete giving up of hatred, for the ending of hatred, for the wiping out of hatred, for the fading away of hatred, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to hatred, for the cessation of hatred, for the abandoning of hatred, and for the relinquishing of all hatred, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know hatred for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy hatred, for the complete giving up of hatred, for the ending of hatred, for the wiping out of hatred, for the fading away of hatred, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to hatred, for the cessation of hatred, for the abandoning of hatred, and for the relinquishing of all hatred, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop.”

b. “Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know delusion for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy delusion, for the complete giving up of delusion, for the ending of delusion, for the wiping out of delusion, for the fading away of delusion, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to delusion, for the cessation of delusion, for the abandoning of delusion, and for the relinquishing of all delusion, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know delusion for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy delusion, for the complete giving up of delusion, for the ending of delusion, for the wiping out of delusion, for the fading away of delusion, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to delusion, for the cessation of delusion, for the abandoning of delusion, and for the relinquishing of all delusion, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

c. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know anger for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy anger, for the complete giving up of anger, for the ending of anger, for the wiping out of anger, for the fading away of anger, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to anger, for the cessation of anger, for the abandoning of anger, and for the relinquishing of all anger, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know anger for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy anger, for the complete giving up of anger, for the ending of anger, for the wiping out of anger, for the fading away of anger, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to anger, for the cessation of anger, for the abandoning of anger, and for the relinquishing of all anger, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

d. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know animosity for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy animosity, for the complete giving up of animosity, for the ending of animosity, for the wiping out of animosity, for the fading away of animosity, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to animosity, for the cessation of animosity, for the abandoning of animosity, and for the relinquishing of all animosity, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know animosity for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy animosity, for the complete giving up of animosity, for the ending of animosity, for the wiping out of animosity, for the fading away of animosity, becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to animosity, for the cessation of animosity, for the abandoning of animosity, and for the relinquishing of all animosity, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

e. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know contempt for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy contempt, for the complete giving up of contempt, for the ending of contempt, for the wiping out of contempt, for the fading away of contempt, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to contempt, for the cessation of contempt, for the abandoning of contempt, and for the relinquishing of all contempt, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know contempt for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy contempt, for the complete giving up of contempt, for the ending of contempt, for the wiping out of contempt, for the fading away of contempt, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to contempt, for the cessation of contempt, for the abandoning of contempt, and for the relinquishing of all contempt, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

f. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know malice for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy malice, for the complete giving up of malice, for the ending of malice, for the wiping out of malice, for the fading away of malice, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to malice, for the cessation of malice, for the abandoning of malice, and for the relinquishing of all malice, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know malice for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy malice, for the complete giving up of malice, for the ending of malice, for the wiping out of malice, for the fading away of malice, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to malice, for the cessation of malice, for the abandoning of malice, and for the relinquishing of all malice, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

g. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know jealousy for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy jealousy, for the complete giving up of jealousy, for the ending of jealousy, for the wiping out of jealousy, for the fading away of jealousy, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to jealousy, for the cessation of jealousy, for the abandoning of jealousy, and for the relinquishing of all jealousy, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know jealousy for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy jealousy, for the complete giving up of jealousy, for the ending of jealousy, for the wiping out of jealousy, for the fading away of jealousy, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to jealousy, for the cessation of jealousy, for the abandoning of jealousy, and for the relinquishing of all jealousy, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

h. “Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know stinginess for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy stinginess, for the complete giving up of stinginess, for the ending of stinginess, for the wiping out of stinginess, for the fading away of stinginess, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to stinginess, for the cessation of stinginess, for the abandoning of stinginess, and for the relinquishing of all stinginess, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know stinginess for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy stinginess, for the complete giving up of stinginess, for the ending of stinginess, for the wiping out of stinginess, for the fading away of stinginess, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to stinginess, for the cessation of stinginess, for the abandoning of stinginess, and for the relinquishing of all stinginess, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

i. “Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know deceitfulness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy deceitfulness, for the complete giving up of deceitfulness, for the ending of deceitfulness, for the wiping out of deceitfulness, for the fading away of deceitfulness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to deceitfulness, for the cessation of deceitfulness, for the abandoning of deceitfulness, and for the relinquishing of all deceitfulness, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know deceitfulness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy deceitfulness, for the complete giving up of deceitfulness, for the ending of deceitfulness, for the wiping out of deceitfulness, for the fading away of deceitfulness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to deceitfulness, for the cessation of deceitfulness, for the abandoning of deceitfulness, and for the relinquishing of all deceitfulness, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

j. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know cunningness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy cunningness, for the complete giving up of cunningness, for the ending of cunningness, for the wiping out of cunningness, for the fading away of cunningness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to cunningness, for the cessation of cunningness, for the abandoning of cunningness, and for the relinquishing of all cunningness, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know cunningness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy cunningness, for the complete giving up of cunningness, for the ending of cunningness, for the wiping out of cunningness, for the fading away of cunningness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to cunningness, for the cessation of cunningness, for the abandoning of cunningness, and for the relinquishing of all cunningness, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

k. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know arrogance for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy arrogance, for the complete giving up of arrogance, for the ending of arrogance, for the wiping out of arrogance, for the fading away of arrogance, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to arrogance, for the cessation of arrogance, for the abandoning of arrogance, and for the relinquishing of all arrogance, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know arrogance for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy arrogance, for the complete giving up of arrogance, for the ending of arrogance, for the wiping out of arrogance, for the fading away of arrogance, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to arrogance, for the cessation of arrogance, for the abandoning of arrogance, and for the relinquishing of all arrogance, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

l. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know impulsiveness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy impulsiveness, for the complete giving up of impulsiveness, for the ending of impulsiveness, for the wiping out of impulsiveness, for the fading away of impulsiveness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to impulsiveness, for the cessation of impulsiveness, for the abandoning of impulsiveness, and for the relinquishing of all impulsiveness, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know impulsiveness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy impulsiveness, for the complete giving up of impulsiveness, for the ending of impulsiveness, for the wiping out of impulsiveness, for the fading away of impulsiveness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to impulsiveness, for the cessation of impulsiveness, for the abandoning of impulsiveness, and for the relinquishing of all impulsiveness, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

m. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know narcissism for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy narcissism, for the complete giving up of narcissism, for the ending of narcissism, for the wiping out of narcissism, for the fading away of narcissism, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to narcissism, for the cessation of narcissism, for the abandoning of narcissism, and for the relinquishing of all narcissism, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know narcissism for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy narcissism, for the complete giving up of narcissism, for the ending of narcissism, for the wiping out of narcissism, for the fading away of narcissism, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to narcissism, for the cessation of narcissism, for the abandoning of narcissism, and for the relinquishing of all narcissism, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

n. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know conceit for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy conceit, for the complete giving up of conceit, for the ending of conceit, for the wiping out of conceit, for the fading away of conceit, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to conceit, for the cessation of conceit, for the abandoning of conceit, and for the relinquishing of all conceit, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know conceit for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy conceit, for the complete giving up of conceit, for the ending of conceit, for the wiping out of conceit, for the fading away of conceit, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to conceit, for the cessation of conceit, for the abandoning of conceit, and for the relinquishing of all conceit, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

o. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know intoxication for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy intoxication, for the complete giving up of intoxication, for the ending of intoxication, for the wiping out of intoxication, for the fading away of intoxication, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to intoxication, for the cessation of intoxication, for the abandoning of intoxication, and for the relinquishing of all intoxication, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

"And what are these two?

"Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

"Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know intoxication for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy intoxication, for the complete giving up of intoxication, for the ending of intoxication, for the wiping out of intoxication, for the fading away of intoxication, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to intoxication, for the cessation of intoxication, for the abandoning of intoxication, and for the relinquishing of all intoxication, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.

p. "Bhikkhus, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know heedlessness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy heedlessness, for the complete giving up of heedlessness, for the ending of heedlessness, for the wiping out of heedlessness, for the fading away of heedlessness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to heedlessness, for the cessation of heedlessness, for the abandoning of heedlessness, and for the relinquishing of all heedlessness, and for good, these two qualities should be fully developed and cultivated.

“And what are these two?

“Serene Mental Quietude (samatha), and Penetrative Insight (vipassana).

“Therefore, to fully and deeply understand reality, one has to recognize and know heedlessness for what it truly is. Furthermore, to thoroughly destroy heedlessness, for the complete giving up of heedlessness, for the ending of heedlessness, for the wiping out of heedlessness, for the fading away of heedlessness, for becoming dispassionate towards all things pertaining to heedlessness, for the cessation of heedlessness, for the abandoning of heedlessness, and for the relinquishing of all heedlessness, and for good, these two qualities you must fully develop and cultivate.”

Now, this is what The Blessed One instructed.

Meanwhile, The Bhikkhus became utterly delighted and inspired on hearing these words, spoken to them by The Blessed One Himself.

(Here ends Book of the Twos)

Sādhu Sādhu Sādhu

Translated by Bhikkhu Candana

Copyright © Bhikkhu Candana 2020, 2026

a final note

As this volume comes to a close, the words of The Blessed One and the Noble Disciples continue to echo beyond the page.

The Dhamma does not end where a book ends. It truly lives whenever and wherever it is reflected upon, practiced and realized.

This work has been prepared with a single guiding intention: that The Teachings be preserved and made available in a way that allows their voice to come through clearly, directly, and without unnecessary interruptions, let alone any obstructions.

The Dhamma has always been something to be heard, contemplated, and lived – not merely studied. For this reason, the effort throughout this project has been to keep the presentation as faithful, transparent, and uninterrupted as possible, so that readers may encounter The Blessed One's Teachings in their own immediacy and depth.

The Aṅguttara Nikāya, with its practical and graduated structure, speaks intimately to the conditions of human life. Its teachings touch the struggles, responsibilities, relationships, and aspirations shared by people in every era. Preserving such guidance is not an academic task alone, but a living service to beings who seek clarity, peace, and Liberation.

Whatever goodness may have arisen through the preparation of this volume is not held as personal possession. It is offered in gratitude to the many individuals whose quiet generosity and support have made this work possible, and it is shared with all who turn toward The Dhamma with sincerity. May the merit extend outward without measure.

May these volumes travel far, as they meet (and "be greeted" by) all those who are ready for them…

